400,000 RESERVES CALLED OUT, FRANCE REFUSES TO YIELD; LLOYDS CANCELS WAR RISKS

LONDON, JULY 25.—REPORTS THAT GERMANY HAS DECIDED TO CALL OUT 400,000 OF THE ARMY RESERVES, THAT FRANCE WILL FOLLOW SUIT, AND NEWS THAT LLOYDS WILL NOT HOLD THEMSELVES RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR RISKS ON SHIPPING LATER THAN AUGUST 15, TO-DAY ENLARGED THE OMINOUS CLOUD OF GLOOM THAT HAS RISEN OVER THE EUROPEAN HORIZON SINCE THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE MOROCCAN SITUATION THROUGH GERMANY'S AGGRESSIVE ACTION.

EMPEROR WILLIAM IS SAID TO HAVE CURTAILED HIS SEA CRUISE AND STARTED BACK TO BERLIN AS A RESULT OF DISPATCHES SENT HIM BY WIRELESS.

THE ENGLISH FOREIGN OFFICE IS KEEPING CLOSE WATCH ON THE SITUATION. IT IS APPARENTLY THE BELIEF HERE THAT GERMANY HAS NO DIRECT AIM AT MOROCCO ITSELF, BUT IS REALLY AFTER A RICH SLICE OF THE CONGO STATE WITH ITS VAST RESOURCES.

THAT THE NEGOTIATIONS BEING CARRIED ON BY FRANCE AND GERMANY HAVE BEEN PERILOUSLY NEAR A CRISIS SEVERAL TIMES WITHIN THE LAST FORTY-EIGHT HOURS WAS LEARNED TO-DAY FROM AN ATTACHE IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH THE SITUATION.

"IF THEY ARE BROKEN OFF, IT MEANS WAR," HE SAID. "ON A SLENDER THREAD THE PEACE OF EUROPE DEPENDS."

RED AND BLUE CLASH IN A SHARP CONFLICT

Troops from the Red Army ran into troops from the Blue at North Reading to-day and the sharpest conflict of the Massachusetts war game resulted, according to a report that reached the Red Army shortly after it encamped to-day at Middleton.

The first real firing of the war took place and the conflict raged with such intensity that some of the outposts from the Red Army heard the firing plainly.

When the Red Army, which holds Boston and which the Blue forces are seeking to displace, marched to-day from Lynnfield to Middleton, they sent out Troops A and B, to the westward for scout duty, that being in the direction where the Blues were encamped at Tewksbury.

Cavalry Moves West.

At the same time General Clark of the Blues was anxious to get a line on the Reds and his two troops of cavalry was sent westward in the direction of North Reading.

The two forces came together and the engagement was believed to be a hotly contested one. Just what the result was had not reached any of the headquarters. The clash was similar to the one that took place at Reading yesterday, which was claimed at first as a victory for the Blues, but later said to have been a draw by the umpires.

While the Blue brigade was still encamped at Tewksbury, trying to get a line on the scarlet enemy, the news was received through wireless that the Reds had made an early march of a dozen miles and had taken a position at Middleton almost in direct line between Tewksbury and Newburyport.

At times to-day the scouts and more daring riders of the cavalry doing outpost duty for both armies came close to each other and clashes were expected at any time.

Governor Foss, Adjutant-General Pearson and Major Grout made a good deal of the march with the Red Army to-day and finally took a position at Southwick's Corner, where the Governor reviewed the troops with the red bands on their hats as they marched by.

For a time the war game was turned into a social function, regardless of the fact that hostile Blue soldiers might swoop down on the Reds at any time and capture them.

Says Pew to Foss.

General Pew, in command of the Reds, shook hands with the Governor.

"This is a fine day," remarked the General.

"Yes," replied the Governor, "this is a wonderful day and this has been a wonderful performance of the boys."

Governor Foss, turning to a reporter of the AMERICAN, said:

"I tell you that this is something worth

RESULTS OF THE LAST FRANCO-GERMAN WAR

The German war machine, the creation of Prince Bismark, had it first great test in the war between Prussia and France in 1870. Napoleon III. feared the growing power of Prussia, and so when the the Spanish cdown was offered to a German Prince, he declared war. It lastud fourteen months. Within a few months the Germans had under arms 7,000,000 men.

The war was a procession of German victories by Von Moltke and Bismark. At sedan Napoleon hibself was made prisoner, as were fifty generals, 5,000 other officers and 84,000 private soldiers. The German army moved on to Paris and after a seige of six months, the city was captured bythe Germans.

Germany took the provinces of Alsace and Loraine, and forced France to pay her a war indemnity of $1,000,000,000.

BEAUMONT IS LEADING FLIERS

GLASGOW, July 25.—Lieutenant Count Jacques de Lesseps of the French army, whose flying name is Andre Beaumont, snatched the lead in the Daily Mail's 1,010-mile race for a $50,000 purse from Pierre Jules Veilrus to-day. Leaving the aerodrome at Edinburgh in a gusty wind, Beaumont and Veilrus set out at 9 o'clock upon the third stage of the journey from the Scotch capital to Bristol, England, by the way of Stirling, Glasgow, Carlisle and Manchester. The distance of the third leg is 385 miles down the west coast.

WEST SWEPT BY COLD WAVE

CHICAGO, July 25.—Chicago and the middle West, not a few days ago sweltering in a death-dealing heat blast—to-day are in the midst of a fifty more unseasonable cold wave. The sudden change from almost the hottest weather in history to the lowest July temperature on record, along with a terrific gale that blew over the city and lashed the lake into a fury, wrecking yachts and stopping marine traffic, probably will make the cold wave as costly as the heat that preceded it. The corn crop is now threatened with blight for lack of heat.

FRANCE LEANS TO ENGLAND IN IMBROGLIO WITH GERMANY

The extreme character of the German demands make for their own destruction, in the opinion of British diplomats. Germany is clearly considered as having overreached herself in the Moroccan issue. Germany was doubtless seeking to drive as hard a bargain as possible.

But even this policy has been allowed to strain the diplomatic courtesies. None was quicker to see this than France, which has been suspected of leniency toward Germany with a view toward feathering her own nest. But France is now regarded as having stiffened up, with a leaning more to the British view now.

France could not but regard as preposterous the demand for 200 miles of coast and the hinterland of the French Congo and the right of pre-emption which France now enjoys over the Belgian Congo.

Danger to England.

With these two "compensations" was thrown in the demand for a sphere of commercial influence in Morocco. This to English eyes meant the occupation of Agadir for a "sphere of commercial influence" in a country like Morocco necessarily involves territorial occupation of control.

Here for England lay the danger. Agadir was the wedge and the Congo the hammer with which Germany was seeking to drive the wedge into the entente cordiale.

France could not entertain either of the two proposals relative to the French or the Belgian Congo. But Germany was at Agadir, and intended to remain at Agadir unless she received compensations.

The importance which Great Britain attached to the German occupation of Agadir was indirectly but plainly indicated by Mr. Lloyd-George in a speech delivered at the Mansion House last night. The Chancellor of the Exchequer said:

Views of Lloyd-George.

"I believe it essential in the highest interests not merely of this country, but of the world, that Great Britain should at all hazards maintain her place and prestige among the great powers. Her potent influence has been many times in the past, and may yet be in the future, invaluable for the cause of human liberty. It has more than once in the past redeemed continental nations, who are sometimes too apt to forget that service, from overwhelming disaster and even from national extinction.

"I would make great sacrifices to preserve peace. I conceive nothing that would justify the disturbance of international good will except questions of the gravest national moment, but if a situation were to be enforced upon us in which peace could only be preserved by the surrender of the great and beneficent position that Great Britain has won by centuries of heroism and achievement—by allowing Great Britain to be treated where her interests were vitally affected as if she were of no account in the cabinet of nations—then I say emphatically that peace at that price would be a humiliation intolerable for a great country like ours to endure."

France Is Hit Hard.

Whatever fears previously existed here as to the solidarity of the Entente Cordiale are now dissipated by the disclosure of the German ambitions. France, it is felt, is too directly affected, not to say insulted, by the demands relative to the Congo not to realize more strongly than ever the necessity of the alliance that strength and her power of resistance. As the Times says this morning:

"Germany's present demarche throws light upon the whole method and purpose of German statesmanship. Some indignation is expressed in the German press at the fact that Herr von Kiderlen Waechter's suggestions have been brought into the light and at the criticism which they have evoked. We cannot pretend to regret either the publicity or the criticism. Perhaps nothing is less by revelations which show the true pretensions of the greatest military power, even though the diplomacy of that power itself may prefer to move in the dark.

"The purport of such demands as were outlined in Berlin is nothing less than a claim for absolute European predominance. Neither France nor Great Britain could have entertained them for a moment without confessing themselves overborne by German power. That is not the intention of our French neighbors, nor is it our own.

CITY HALL FEAR OF SALARY CUT

The staff of the City Clerk's office was aroused to-day over the cuts in salary suggested by the Finance Commission in its report on an investigation of the department. In the absence of City Clerk John T. Priest, who is ill at home, the other officials of the department would not discuss the report, though they expressed surprise at many of the recommendations.

For weeks, the commission, through the investigators, has been going through the City Clerk's office, it being one of the few departments which Chairman John A. Sullivan personally examined. The recommendations include a reduction in the salary of City Clerk Priest from $5,000 to $4,000 a year, and a cut in Assistant City Clerk Wilfred J. Doyle's salary from $2,800 to $2,500 a year. Cuts are advised practically all along the line and the removal of several messengers urged.

The Finance Commission recommends changes which will save the city about $15,000 a year by reduction of salaries and the removal of superfluous employes. It also advises a reorganization of the methods employed for receiving, indexing and recording papers, and the establishment of a piecework system.

Political influence, the report says, plays such an important part in the procedure of the department that the City Clerk failing to receive experience when the old Finance Commission made a similar recommendation. The original commission advised cutting the annual appropriation of the office to $40,000 and the present one goes $10,000 better.

"The recording of mortgages and other related instruments, on Mesarchic principle, comparing, correcting and making of marginal references, should be placed upon the same basis as at the Registry of Deeds. Its establishment as a piecework system at the rates paid in the Registry of Deeds, a saving estimated by the experts at $5,000 a year could be effected. One report says:

GERMAN CRUISER HURRIED TO HAYTI

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti, July 25.—Rebel troops are rapidly approaching the city and the Republican troops are described by the local press. In spite of every precaution the news has leaked out that a severe reverse suffered by the Haytian forces and the fall of the capital is believed to be inevitable. In order that to the American warships that are hurrying here it was learned to-day that the German cruiser Bremen has started from Montreal.

MONEY IS LOST ON BIG SARDINE CATCH

Sizing fishermen of the mosquito fleet at 7 wharf are to-day out $500. For the past two days they have brought to this port five hundred barrels of sardine herring, caught in their seins off Nahant. There is no market for the fish at present. At times they are in great demand by the residents of the North End, but sell for only about a dollar a barrel. The fish were taken out to sea and dumped overboard.

Hammerstein Wonders At the Marriage Story.

LONDON—Oscar Hammerstein is wondering why the newspapers should make him out to be worse than he is. By stating that he is married to Miss Alvarez, they accuse him of being a bigamist, for, even supposing that he desired to marry, he is not yet divorced. "People have been talking about me and Miss Alvarez for two years," said Mr. Hammerstein, "simply because we happen to be good comrades. Of the various problems that are worrying me at present the chief is where to find a decent five-cent cigar in London."

Heat Kills Many Germans.

BERLIN—The heat wave has not abated its terrible effects throughout the country. Here shown in the deaths of adults and hundreds of prostrations. A hundred soldiers, of whom two died, fell out of the ranks during the exercises at Halle, Prussian Saxony. Twenty deaths in two days are reported in the Province of Saxony. Thirty deaths have occurred in three days between Dresden and Cologne.

American Girl Drowned.

BERNE—Miss Mary Louise Thomas, an American, and her Swiss teacher, Miss Levanchy, have been drowned in Lake Lugano near Cicrera. They were in a boat with four others when their craft was run down by a motorboat. Their companions were saved.

LONDON—Edward H. Randolph, United States Attorney for the Western division of Louisiana, and Mrs. Henry Yorree, of Shreveport, La., have been married here.

FIGHT FIRE AT PLUM ISLAND

NEWBURYPORT, July 25.—Fifty cottagers, both men and women, lost their beds and fought a heavy fire on Plum Island in a pouring rain early to-day. The cottage of Augustus J. Pike of Salisbury, which was unoccupied, was destroyed, with a loss of $1,500. Adjoining cottages were ignited, but were saved by the heavy rain and by the fine fighters throwing sand on every burning spot on the weak walls.

The Newburyport police and Captain John Maddock of the Plum Island life saving station, who discovered the fire, think that it was set. Captain Maddocks says that a woman saw a man run away from the vicinity of the Pike cottage and take to the open ocean in a dory just before the cottage burst into flames.

The Pike cottage was located at the upper end of Plum Island, near the ferry and on the marsh side of the bank. Captain Maddocks saw fire shooting from the cottage at 1 a. m. in the northwest life saving crew and constituents of neighboring cottages rushed. The flames swept the Pike cottage rapidly. When adjoining cottages ignited it was feared for a while that the beach would be swept. A telephone call was sent to Newburyport for bold apparatus in readiness.

All the cottagers were asleep when the alarm came. They rushed out in the rear garments they could pick up, men, boys and women, making a motley though efficient crew to combat the fire. The most useful fire apparatus was a shovel. Bushels of sand were thrown upon the threatened roofs, confining the fire loss to the Pike cottage.

KNIGHTS HOLD COLUMBUS FETE

The members of Bishop Cheverus Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, and their friends will hold a harbor excursion and outing in honor of "Columbus Day," the day when Columbus set out on his voyage of discovery, to-morrow.

Some 1,000 will make the trip. A steamship will leave Rowes Wharf promptly at 10 o'clock. After a few hours' sail around the harbor the excursionists will land at Fort Warren, where dinner will be served and a couple of hours spent in games. On leaving the fort the observers of the day will enjoy another harbor cruise, returning to Rowes Wharf about 7 o'clock.

The committee has decided that in case to-morrow should be stormy the outing will be postponed until the following day.

No tickets will be sold at the wharf. Members of the committee will be at the headquarters of the Knights of Columbus, No. 15 Boylston street, this evening, to receive any return tickets and to resell any that may be returned.

ELIMINATE HORSES IN N. Y. FIRE RUNS

NEW YORK, July 25.—Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson is planning to have by March 1, 1912, at least 150 pieces of automobile fire apparatus in operation here. This move is more sweeping in its character and scope than any made in the history of the fire department in the last century, and will cost the city more than $750,000. Commissioner John-son considers that the abolition of horses will probably allow the lengthening of the ladders and water towers, owing to the fact that corners can be turned more sharply by motor vehicles.

WHOLE TOWN PAYS SUNDAY LAW FINES

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Practically the entire population of Glen Echo, an amusement place just beyond the District of Columbia line in Maryland, rat-ified the law of that State Sunday and to-day appeared before Judge Jennings Reading of Rockville and paid fines amount-ing to $1,000. Glen Echo has a population of 115. Of these ninety-six were arrested for violating the law designed to preserve the Sabbath.

BOSTON YACHT SKIPPER LOST

Ernest W. Day, master mechanic for the Hood Rubber Company in Watertown, may be the victim of a mysterious sea tragedy. Since he left on his vacation June 30 no word has been received from him and detectives employed by the company have learned only that he sailed with three companions on the yawl-rigged yacht Annette. He is an enthusiastic yachtsman and every year took a sea trip for his vacation.

Further mystery in his disappearance is found in the fact that despite the best efforts of the Hood Rubber Company and its detectives, no trace can be found of a yacht Annette. Mr. Day owned his wife and told several friends that he was to sail on the Annette, yet no such boat is registered in any of the Boston yacht clubs and the vessel is not known to yachtsmen of this section. It has been learned that an auxiliary yawl-rigged yacht Annette put into New Bedford Saturday, July 1, with Mr. Day and his companions on board, and that it sailed again the next day, presumably to round the Cape for Boston. There was a storm that night and nothing has since been found of the missing vessel or her crew.

May Have Changed Name.

The mystery of the Annette may be solved by the remark of Mr. Day to one of his friends at the Hood Rubber Company works that "We are going to sail as soon as the boat is painted." It is the belief of Boston yachtsmen that in repainting the boat its name was changed, and that this accounts for the fact that there is no trace of a yacht Annette in these waters.

Mr. Day lived with his family at the Chatsworth apartment house on Mesarchic-setts avenue, Cambridge. He occupied flat No. 20.

Three other men, one of them named White, who lived in New Bedford, were also in the Blue the craft touched at New Bedford.

Search also is being made for White by his friends and employers in New Bedford and other points along the Massachusetts coast.

Trusted employes of the Hood Rubber Company have twice visited New Bedford within a week in search of information.

They have made it plain that the accounts of the missing Hood Company employe are straight, and that no suggestion of dishonesty is attached to him. The officials of the company have come to a loss to understand why he overstayed his leave, and why no word has been received from him in the almost a month that has elapsed since the time he was due to report back from his vacation.

Fears are expressed by the Hood officials that the Annette has met with an accident and that death may have ended her cruise.

Touched at New Bedford.

In some manner information reached the Hood office that the yacht had not touched at New Bedford. The investigator for the company talked with Commodore Elkins, son of the New Bedford Yacht Club and with Janitor Lanes of that organization. He obtained information from both. From Hanna he learned that the Annette put in on Saturday, July 1, and anchored off the club float. The four men on board the craft, including Day and White, came ashore into the city, where she spent several hours.

On their return they said something about going further up into Buzzards Bay, and there was also something said about attempting to reach Boston by way of the Cape.

They sailed out the following day and did not return to New Bedford.

There was no word from July 2 and both Commodore Ellison and Mr. Hanna expressed fear that the Annette might attempted to go around Cape Cod she might have been caught in the fog. Both said it was a staunch looking craft and might weather an ordinary blow, but in the summer fog the waters at this time would make it dangerous for a small craft at sea.

BITLER IS CAPTAIN OF THE NAVY YARD

Captain Reuben O. Bitler, who has been president of the naval court martial at the Charlestown Navy Yard several months, has assumed the duties of captain and executive officer of the yard, relieving Captain John E. Craven, who has held that position a year and a half.

Captain Craven has been ordered to command the battleship New Jersey, which will join the battleship fleet about August 1. The New Jersey has been under repairs at the Charlestown yard more than a year. The delay on the New Jersey is due to the contractors who are supplying the new type ammunition carriages and hoists not delivering the parts on contract time.

QUEER MYSTERY IN DEATH CASE

FITCHBURG, July 25.—The district attorney's office at Worcester has been notified of the mysterious death of Norah Maldessian, a young Armenian, in the dying room of Mill 4 of the Parkhill Manufacturing Company on Friday. The police were called into the case after the associate medical examiner, Dr. Appleton M. Pierce of Leominster said that an autopsy had failed to establish the cause of death.

It was at first reported the young man had died of heart disease, but the friends believe other than natural causes were responsible for his sudden death and an autopsy was asked for.

The autopsy was conducted by Dr. Pierce, Medical Examiner Frederick H. Thompson of Fitchburg and Dr. E. P. Miller and Dr. Harry Nye of Leominster. Assistant Medical Examiner Pierce stated that the investigation, while of the most thorough and searching nature, failed to establish the cause of death, consequently the police were called into the case and Judge Thomas Gallagher of the Fitchburg Police Court has asked for an inquest.

Chief of Police A. Q. Thayer has detailed Inspector Thomas Gidley to make an investigation. Superintendent of Wires George Jeffs also went to the mill to make an inspection of the wires in the vicinity of the place where the man stood when he dropped dead.

The autopsy report did not contain anything that would clear up the mystery. Employes of the mill say that Maldessian screamed as if in great fright and fell to the floor dead. The cause is baffling the police as well as the medical examiner.

CATCHES MOLASSES AND HEAVY ANCHOR

While trawling in the south channel off George's Banks for haddock, Captain Michael Breen of the steam trawler Crest made two of the strangest catches in his career. One was an 800-pound anchor, and the other was a hogshead of molasses. The molasses was ruined, but the cask was in fine shape. Years ago an extensive molasses trade between East Indian ports and Boston was carried on. The Crest probably belonged to a schooner which was wrecked off this coast.

COLT AND WIFE EACH SEE SON

ST. JOHN, Que., July 25.—The merry little game of hide and seek in the Barrymore-Colt divorce preliminaries goes on. Russell Colt has been here and has seen his son, "Sammy." Then he left for New York.

The next train from Montreal brought his actress wife, Ethel Barrymore. She had been staying at the Place Viger Hotel, Montreal, waiting outh her husband left the little town where their son is staying with Mr. and Mrs. S. Fring. Miss Barrymore has seen her son several times. The plainly dressed little woman caused little comment here, few people in the town knowing anything of the case.

It is evident from messages that Mr. Colt sent from here that he is attempting a reconciliation with his wife. From Miss Barrymore's action it is also evident that this is the last thing she desires.

OUT OF WORK, TAKES HIS LIFE

Charles A. Hoyt of No. 44 Fairmont street, Dorchester, was found dead in his bed early to-day from gas poisoning. The man had been despondent over financial difficulties lately, and Medical Examiner Leary, who was called in, pronounced the case one of suicide.

The deceased, who was an electrician, had been out of work for about four months. He retired early last night, and to-day when his wife went to wake him she was greeted by overpowering fumes of gas. The windows having been tightly closed and the two gas cocks in the room turned on full.

One of the daughters rushed next door to a telephone and called in Dr. R. B. Scales of Washington street, who pronounced the man dead from asphyxiation. Hoyt originally came from Nova Scotia, but has made his home in different parts of Dorchester for a number of years.

RUSSIAN AVIATOR IS DASHED TO DEATH

ST. PETERSBURG, July 25.—Aviator Slusarenkos was badly hurt and his passenger, M. THIRD DIVORCE FOR "CHIMAY"

PARIS, July 25.—The third marriage of Clara Ward (formerly the Princess de Chimay) has resulted in a legal separation. M. Riccardi, the Italian tourist agent, who became her husband after her parting from Rigo, the violinist, was granted a decree in the Civil Court yesterday which provides that the couple shall live apart and that neither remarry.

Clara Ward, the beautiful daughter of a wealthy shipping man of Detroit, was married in 1890 to Prince Joseph de Caraman-Chimay of Belgium. The ceremony was a great social event in Paris. It was performed by the Papal Nuncio, and the American and British Ambassadors were witnesses for the bride.

The couple seemed to live happily for four years, when Rigo, a Hungarian gypsy violinist, who played in Paris cafes, attracted the notice of the Princess. They eloped in 1894. Later they were married and traveled through Europe.

But they had a quarrel and separated. Rigo went to America and his wife obtained a divorce.

In June, 1904, she was married to Peppino Riccardi, a canvasser employed in a tourist agency in Paris.

Last Summer it was reported that this marriage, too, had become unhappy, and that Mme. Riccardi would sue for divorce and settle a large sum of money on Riccardi. What the financial arrangements called for the legal separation will be is not known.

MAJOR WILLIS CLARKE OF WALTHAM DEAD

WALTHAM, July 25.—Major Willis W. Clarke, city messenger of Waltham since 1906, died at a Boston hospital, where he underwent an operation last week. He was one of the most prominent citizens of Waltham. He was born in Westfield, August 17, 1840.

RECEIVER'S SALE

Necessity Compels Us to Cut Prices

The important reason for doing so is that the receiver must have money to pay the creditors. Necessity is the mother of achievement. Today, Wednesday, and every day until this stock is disposed of, will be a big day. Our misfortune is your gain. To argue with you further in this battle for money is unnecessary.

NEW WEST END WAR DECLARED

There is a new war brewing among the stockholders of the West End Street Railway company. The most determined protective committee changes its attitude of antagonism toward adopting the provisions of the West End bill, which has just become a law. It is thought along State street that a new committee will be formed among the holders of West End common stock and the public will see two factions at war in the traction corporation.

Under the terms of the West End bill the stockholders of the West End are given until September to vote on their adoption of the terms of the bill. If they do not do this, or if a vote condemning the bill is put through, it is not improbable that Governor Foss will call a special session of the Legislature to straighten out the tangle.

News of the war was received to-day by the Boston News Bureau, which is not strictly friendly to Governor Foss and the West End bill.

TIME CLOCK ON MOTHER-IN-LAW

Is ten days too long for a mother-in-law's visit?

Judge Dasgree on the question, which has been agitated anew through the case of Mrs. May Coyle of Boston.

Mrs. Coyle went to Brooklyn to visit her married son, Harry. Her daughter-in-law, also named Mrs. May Coyle, had the mother-in-law summoned into a Brooklyn court on complaint that she was disturbing the peace in the Coyle household.

"My mother-in-law took charge of everything the minute she got here," said young Mrs. Coyle. "She thought I didn't know how to cook, how to wash the baby, how to do anything. Finally she turned on husband against me. She has been here ten days so far."

The Brooklyn justice said:

"Ten days is long enough for any mother-in-law to hold possession. I advise you to take the boy's wife and leave Boston."

The elder Mrs. Coyle did so and married couples have been talking about the mother-in-law matter ever since. Some say that ten days is nine days too long for a mother-in-law to stick around. In some cases, where mother-in-law has money, no time limit is set for visits.

The question is being talked over by other judges. It has spread to Western cities.

Despatches to-day from Chicago quote Judge Goodnow of the Domestic Relations Court of that city as saying:

"A mother-in-law often pours oil on troubled waters. She is the first one called when illness comes, and is always more ready than anyone else to serve. I have good mothers-in-law and think the world of both."

But Magistrate Maguire of New York says:

"Mothers-in-law are constitutionally bossy. It seems to be their exquisite function to domineer and to tread upon the feelings of their daughters-in-law. They seem to forget they were once daughters-in-law and had mothers-in-law inflicted on them."

The question has been put, also, that maybe the mother-in-laws do not forget their own early troubles, but remember them keenly and are only taking revenge for what they suffered when they were young wives.

RED AND BLUE ARMIES ON MOVE IN THE BIG WAR GAME

Gen. Pew Sets Forces in Motion to Meet Troops of Gen. Clark for Decisive Battle.

while. It is something worth looking at. It makes one proud of the fighting force of this State. I am going to be as much in this fighting game myself as I can."

Lieutenant Gooding of Company D, who has seen six years of active service, having fought in the Philippines, met the Governor.

"This must be play for you," remarked the Governor.

"It is," replied the soldier, "but it is the kind of play I like."

The Governor then went to Boxford, where the artillery duel is to take part in the war game is located.

After reaching Middleton a corps of cavalry was dispatched southward toward Reading in order to shut off an attempt at a flank movement toward Boston by the Blue forces in that direction.

The march of the Red brigade to-day was made without a single accident. The weather was delightful and the men were in fine fettle. All of them were eager for a smell of powder and they expected that they would get it before evening.

This is the all-important day in the great war game, from the commanders-in-chief's point of view. A bad move on the part of either commander would lead to his advantage when it would be hard to overcome. Scouts have been thrown out well in the advance by both armies, and clashes are expected early in the day. The advance guard is making every effort to get a line on the enemy, and wireless messages are flashing out the latest news of the men in front.

Governor Foss left division headquarters at Wakefield, where he passed the night under canvas and is in the centre of the big war game, watching every move with great interest. He wore a gray suit and straw hat. He arrived at division headquarters with Colonel Loring, Major Green and Assistant Secretary Hatton. After dinner at the Sautang Inn he visited the headquarters of General Pew of the Blues. He is accompanied by Adjutant-General Pearson to-day in his viewing of the manoeuvres. When seen early to-day by an AMERICAN man he said:

Governor Enjoys Army Life.

"I should have been in the field earlier but the Legislature kept me busy. I think it's great. The militia is going to get a great deal of good out of these manoeuvres. I am in the hands of Adjutant-General Pearson and don't know what my programme for the day is to be. I hope to get on the firing line. I also hope to give considerable time to the manoeuvres if the Legislature does not interefere."

The success of General Clark in effecting an entire change of his front in twenty-four hours is praised by the regulars of both the two armies. This move on the part of General Clark has inspired his entire brigade with the hope that they are to win a victory in the manoeuvres.

The bright sunshine which greeted the militiamen to-day inspired them in their best efforts. Although the roads and fields are somewhat muddy, the air is crisp and cool, and it is an ideal day for large manoeuvres. The sun soon dried out the wet clothes and belongings of the soldiers, and they were happy after their drenchings of yesterday.

Sanitary Conditions Excellent.

The sanitary conditions in the two camps are excellent thus far. The locations of the camps have been well selected and the sanitary regulations strictly enforced. The camps are well policed and there has been no disorder. All the commands are trying out the new United States Army dutchoven for burning camp refuse and they are working well.

The food is good and there is plenty of it. The spirit of destroying property of farmers along the line of march has entirely disappeared from these manoeuvres.

Headquarters is delighted with the showing made by automatic trucks as compared with horse-drawn vehicles in previous engagements. Although some trucks were put out of commission by individual weakness, heavy loading or during in bad roads, altogether they far excelled the other methods of transportation in speed, manner carried and general stability.

This afternoon both armies will devote to athlete sports. Every company will have a team. The contests will take place in the various camps and during their progress in the meantime will cease.

"Golly, I'm hungry!" "Brown," said Forbes, "when you get sight of that dollar Table d'Hote at The American House Venetian Room you'll wish you had an appetite for two!"

BLUE ARMY STARTS ADVANCE ON REDS AGAIN EARLY TO-DAY

HEADQUARTERS, BLUE ARMY, TEWKSBURY, July 25.—The Blue Army folded its tents, loaded its camp impedimenta on auto trucks and got under way early to-day on a further advance against the Reds in General Clark's rapid move to recapture Boston from the enemy. The advance is towards North Reading. The bright sunshine of the early morning breaking through the clouds that yesterday gave the Blue Army a miserable day of rain and mud, gave promise of a most brilliant day of military manoeuvring. Some spirited clashes between the advance of the two armies is expected to-day and the Blue Army is well prepared.

General Clark's army of Blue passed the night in the fields of the State hospital reservation, with double line sentries posted that were on duty the night before. General Clark's spirited advance is highly praised by the regular army officers.

Out on the Washington road, company A of the Second Infantry, held an advanced position that commands the bridge across the Shawsheen. Off in another direction, two miles or more away, companies H and C of the same regiment held the approaches by way of Billerica and Andover.

A detail from the Signal Corps established a wireless station and got into communication with the station at Wakefield.

The members of Troops A and C of cavalry grinned broadly as they cleaned their rifles to-day. They had been in the first fight of the campaign and had won it as nearly as umpires are allowed to render decisions.

In the words of the troopers, the Red cavalry was defeated in the skirmish at Elmdale and compelled to retreat without learning the strength of the Blue Army.

In the official words of the umpires, the Red cavalrymen were surprised and fired upon by dismounted troopers while they were still mounted and in heavy column, and although they made a clever attempt to retrieve themselves by trying to capture the horses of the Blues, left in the rear, the counter-attack was discovered in time to be repulsed by a well-directed fire of half a squadron.

Fought in Rainstorm.

The umpires say that the skirmish, which was fought in a driving rainstorm, and as realistic as powder could make it, was called off because it had served the purpose of instruction. This is taken to mean, however, that the Reds were outgeneralled and in actual conflict would have lost about half a troop of their men. C. A. C. who is the provost marshal, had his hands full last night, as several hundred men slipped away to Lowell and did not return until the late cars.

The brigade which had camped at Billerica Saturday and Sunday was ordered to move and immediately after breakfast the work of striking camp was commenced and at 7:20 the field was cleared, everything being well policed and the order for the use of the field settled by Brigadier General Rogers, judge advocate general.

The whole work was performed in less than an hour. After a hike of almost two hours, in which seven miles had been covered, the troops pulled into the farm connected with the Tewksbury almshouse, and with the arrival of the Second Infantry, which was in advance, the boxes were opened and the rain came down in torrents. As the overcoats were on the wagons and the ponchos rolled in the shelter tent, the men had to take their medicine.

Rain Drenches Soldiers.

Regardless of the rain, the brigade marched on the field in excellent order and the formation for pitching the shelter tents was well executed.

It took but a few minutes to get into shape and the men immediately went to work entrenching around their tents with bayonets and entrenching tools.

At noon it looked very dubious and everyone predicted rain for the day, but a few minutes after 12 o'clock there was a rift in the clouds.

The sun began to shine and the boys, wet to the skin, came out of their tents like rabbits out of their holes.

Immediately after noon was formed General Clark sent out two battalions of the Second Infantry to perform outpost duty, one being new for outpost work, and one was held in reserve.

REDS START OUT TO DRIVE ENEMY BACK TO MAINE

HEADQUARTERS RED ARMY, LYNNFIELD, July 25.—Promptly at 7 o'clock to-day, the Red Army, under General Hollis A. Pew Jr., began an advance to the north on the Newburyport Turnpike to fall upon the supposed flanking movement by the Blue Army under General Clark.

Troops A and C of cavalry, under Major Smith, were sent on reconnaissance to Middleton, one mile in advance of a battalion of the Ninth, commanded by Major Murray, formed the rear guard of the force during the movement. Coming in from outpost duty, where they were all night, they brought valuable information, but did not clash with the Blue cavalry during the night.

Governor Foss, with Adjutant-General Pearson, and his aid, Major Robert Green, took the field at 7:30, as he and Governor arrived at Lynnfield during the departure of the Red brigade and watched the soldiers break camp, under the direction of United States Army officers. Then he went to Boxford, where the First Battalion Field Artillery is in camp.

Information brought to General Pew from his scouts and outposts convinced him that Governor Clark's cavalry had been thrown to the southward of the Red lines merely as a feint, and that the main body of the Blues was working around to the north in the attempt to execute a turning movement to the right. This, if successful, would outflank General Pew and give the Blues a commanding position in the rear of the troops in Boston.

Despite the uncomfortable night spent by the troops in their wet "dog" tents, all were in high spirits at the prospect of an engagement. The outpost affair of yesterday, in which the Blues, apparently, had the advantage, had given the men of the Red forces a desire for revenge, and they began their "hike" to-day with the determination to drive back the Blues at any cost.

Ammunition had been issued to all the commands last night and the camp was busy within a few moments after reveille had awakened the men from their damp blankets and tents.

All three regiments of infantry had taken practice marches yesterday of anywhere from ten to twelve miles in the rain and mud, so that they were ready for anything to-day. Expectation of an engagement was in the air, and from the moment the troops began the march everyone was interested with keen ears for the sound of firing, indicating that the outposts had come in touch with the enemy.

To Major Meredith of the Fifth Infantry and his battalion are given the honors of leading the advance of the Red Army. Both the Major and his men are keen on the job and in fine fettle. The advance guard moved off on the Newburyport pike with scouts and flankers thrown out, stepping at the usual gait for the Blues. Behind them came the supports and reserves, the entire advance in the rear the remainder of General Pew's forces.

Athletes on the Job.

When a halt is made this afternoon athletic games will be in order in all the infantry commands. These are the preliminaries for the brigade contests on Thursday, and there is much interest in these elimination trials. With good weather it is promised that there will be a large field of entrants in all the organizations, and that some records will be broken in the finals.

To-day the Ninth Infantry is happy over its successful tour of duty in outpost work. Major Murray's battalion of the Ninth, which held the railroad and the Lynnfield pike until relieved by Major Meredith's battalion of the Fifth came in, tired but happy this morning, with the consciousness of duty well done. Companies D and E of the Ninth held the Lake street road around Lake Suntang.

Scouts Bring In News.

Major Terry's battalion of the Eighth, which was on outpost until relieved by Major Murray, brought in some valuable information regarding the movements of the enemy and his strength. It was the reports brought in by Major Terry's scouts that led General Pew to believe General Clark was using his cavalry to blind the Reds by a supposed move to the south while he threw the main body of his command to the north in a turning movement. Information that reached General Pew late last night to the effect that General Clark's troops were encamped near Tewksbury indicated that the Blue commander had been successful in his strategy thus far and had successfully accomplished the difficult movement of changing his front while covering his actual movement with a supposed move to the south.

General Pew and his staff and line officers had a long conference at headquarters after the departure of Governor Foss. Captain Matthew Hanna, U. S. A., chief umpire, dined with General Pew, and following Captain Hanna's return to division headquarters the officers were again summoned to conference. At its close orders for the advance to-day were issued.

SIGNAL CORPS BUSY WITH WIRELESS AND HELIOGRAPH WORK

No officers and men in either the Red or Blue armies are working harder than those of the Signal Corps detail under command of Captain Harry G. Chase. Two wireless sections are in the field, one attached to the First Brigade, the other to the Second. Each wireless section is to keep up communication with the signaling line and the headquarters of the brigade to which it is attached.

Twelve men compose each section and at least eight of them are wireless operators. Communication can easily be had at a range of from ten to twenty miles, as the sets are of high voltage, and capable of sending at a very great distance. If an officer with the firing line wishes to find out the lay of the country without exposing himself, he connects his wireless sets, sends out an orderly on horseback who has attached to his saddle, a reel of wire. This orderly strings out the wire up on the hill and ascertains if the enemy is in sight. He then connects the wire with his buzzer sets, and sends the information.

One reel cart is for the Signal Corps, also attached to each brigade, and both of these carts have a 15 mile stretch of wire that can be used either for buzzers, telephones, or telegraphs.

All the men are either mounted or ride in the automobile trucks or telegraph autos.

Also the Signal Corps has for its equipment acetylene lamps for use at night, heliographs (sun mirrors) for use in the daytime, flags, etc., for use in different places where it is impossible to get communication with the buzzers or wireless.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY FINDS THAT BAUER TOLD STORY TO AMERICAN

District Attorney Pelletier, after an investigation of the charges made through the AMERICAN by Ralph S. Bauer, president of the Lynn Board of Trade, that there had been bribery and attempted bribery at the State House in connection with the attempt to defeat the Lynn track depression bill, made public a statement to-day in which he found that Mr. Bauer had come to the AMERICAN office with his story, as the AMERICAN stated, and that he wanted the support of the paper to prevent a change of vote on the Lynn bill.

The district attorney says that he has not been "able to find any evidence of bribery in the matter."

This case, says the district attorney, resembles others which he has investigated in which parties interested in legislation deem it good practice to "cry bribery in the hope that no man, honest or otherwise, will change his vote."

Findings by Pelletier.

This is the statement in full of the district attorney:

I have examined all the evidence obtainable concerning the allegation of bribery published in the Boston AMERICAN on July 20 as having been made by Mr. Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn.

Mr. Bauer denies the story as published; officials and employes of the AMERICAN maintain that it was printed as told by Mr. Bauer.

One thing is certain, Mr. Bauer went to the AMERICAN, had a story to tell concerning the status of the Lynn track depression legislation, and wanted the support of the paper to prevent any change in the vote of the day before.

I find that there is no evidence of bribery, nor after careful examination of a number of witnesses have I been able to find any evidence of bribery in the matter, even outside the story as printed.

Came to American Office.

This case resembles several that I have investigated where parties interested in legislation sometimes deem it good practice, in order to hold a vote, to cry bribery in the hope that no man, honest or otherwise, will change his vote lest the public may feel that he fails within the public accusation.

Such practices should be frowned down and catch-all accusations and innuendoes perhaps just within the line of criminal acts should be reached if possible by proper legislation.

Mr. Bauer came to the AMERICAN office last Thursday forenoon and saw the circulation manager, with whom he does business. Mr. Bauer said that he had a big story, and that he wanted to see the editor. The circulation manager took Mr. Bauer to the editor's room.

Mr. Bauer stated to the editor that he had a good story about money being used to defeat, or attempt to defeat, the Lynn railroad depression bill. He said that that pending he had been told that he could buy three votes in the Senate on his side by the payment of $500 each.

The editor asked Mr. Bauer if he could print in the AMERICAN that Mr. Ralph S. Bauer, president of the Lynn Board of Trade, charged that money was being improperly used at the State House and that he had been told that he could buy three votes for $500 each. Mr. Bauer said that he would stand for that statement—that that was just what he wanted.

The editor sent for a member of the AMERICAN staff to take Mr. Bauer's statement. Mr. Bauer sat at the editor's desk with a pad on which he had written down the names of the Senators. In making his statement to the reporter, Mr. Bauer said that the campaign expenses of three of the Senators had been promised for their votes against the depression bill, that three other Senators were being paid for their votes and that no effort had been made during the night and would be continued that morning to induce four others to change their votes so that the depression bill would be lost by reconsideration. Then Mr. Bauer made the statement that was printed in the AMERICAN, notes being made by the reporter who wrote it out immediately. Just before Mr. Bauer left the AMERICAN office he stated that he had given the story exclusively to the AMERICAN, not having gone to any other newspaper office.

Bauer Calls Again.

The story was printed in the AMERICAN. Mr. Bauer returned to the AMERICAN office and told the editor that the big type had been used in displaying the story. He asked that smaller type be used in later editions. He said that he was afraid that he would be hauled up before the bar of the Senate and asked to stick to plain his statement.

The editor of the AMERICAN told Mr. Bauer that he (Mr. Bauer) was doing a public service in exposing the bribery of money at the State House, if his story was true. Mr. Bauer left the AMERICAN office.

The names of the Senators that Mr. Bauer had written on a piece of paper were not printed in the AMERICAN.

It developed later that Mr. Bauer met another man connected with this newspaper, with whom he was acquainted, and that he told him that he had given a good graft story to the paper and that he would be in the paper that day.

A young man who sells newspapers happened to be in the office of the circulation manager when Mr. Bauer asked to see the editor, saying that he had a bribery story. Bauer knows this young man.

After the story was printed Bauer met this young man in the street and bought an AMERICAN containing his story. Bauer was in high glee. He said to the young man:

"That's one we got over on them (meaning that it was a scoop on the other newspapers.) That's a daddy story. I gave it to the editor."

The enthusiasm manifested by Mr. Bauer for more legislation, at that time he came to the AMERICAN office and told his story, led to the belief on the part of the AMERICAN that he would be the first man to go to the State House, tell what he knew and demand that the evil doers be exposed and punished.

But it is being said pretty openly just now that Mr. Bauer and some other big men of Lynn who came up to the State House and practically camped there for four months lobbying for "depression," have as little relish for a thorough opening of the lobby question on the Lynn bill as the professional lobbyists of the railroad. Several of the Lynn men made decidedly good fellows of themselves at the State House. They were liberal entertainers. They spent money like princes, and while they bought no votes for cash, their expense accounts would make interesting reading.

LOST GIANT SON IS SOUGHT BY MOTHER

WILTON, N. H., July 25.—Despite every effort of Mrs. Charles E. Frye to find her son, who mysteriously disappeared June 15, every clew has failed and she is to-day on the verge of a collapse, on the mystery that surrounds his disappearance.

On June 15 he told his mother he was going to the store to purchase some goods if the earth had swallowed him he could have effectually have disappeared. He is but seventeen years old but is a giant in size, being 6 feet 2 inches in height and built in proportion. He has blue eyes and auburn hair. His mother, following the AMERICAN, appeals to her boy to come home or at least write, as she cannot stand the suspense much longer.

HEARTY WELCOME FOR 'MRS. WIGGS OF CABBAGE PATCH' AT MAJESTIC

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch was played in Keith for the first time yesterday when two performances were given by the popular Lindsay Morison Stock Company at the Majestic Theatre. The house was filled to capacity at both afternoon and evening performances and from all indications the play will score the biggest hit of the Summer season.

The comedy and delightful homely philosophy which has endeared the book already to thousands, make the dramatization doubly amusing than the reading could possibly be to other words the scenes strike one right away during the first minutes when the lines the best way to be cheerful and just to go ahead and do the best you can delivered.

The highest honors and most of the applause went to Miss Rose Morison. She was on the stage most of the time and carried off the screamingly funny situations in a manner that she thoroughly pleased to contrast most favorably with other performances when the "Cabbage Patch" was playing to two dollar houses. Miss Eleanor Gordon, who took the part of Lovey Mary, was the most attractive looking orphan the audience had seen in a generation. Excellent, too, was the acting of Miss Edna Oliver, who played the difficult role of the tearful, soulful Miss Hray, the unconsolable bride of Mr. Stubbins.

The woman who "would rather raise onions than flowers," the bitter Mrs. Hobson, a most difficult piece of characterization fell to the lot of Mrs. George A. Hibbard, who carried it off in a highly successful manner.

Miss Valarie Valaire was the dainty Miss Lucy. Miss Elizabeth Royal the overgrown Mrs. Schultz and the "Wiggs" kids, Grace Maguire, Grace Roberts and Marion Coale the terrmingly bossy Wiggs kids Jen, Asa, Australia and Europena.

Wilson Melrose had a comedy role in the part of Mr. Stubbins, the awful Mr. Stubbins, whose love-making in the first act was not at all according to Hoyle. The part of Billy Wiggs was well acted by William De Wolf.

Castle Square.

There was nothing quiet about the audience that witnessed the Craig production of "On the Quiet" Augustus Thomas's merry farce, at the Castle Square Theatre last night. In fact the uproarious laughter and tumult rose in such a pitch that the curtain arose again and again, till a witty speech by Donald Meek temporarily allayed the overflowing exuberance of the spectators.

"On the Quiet" is fun at its freshest, fares at its farciest. Marginalia! ranging chorus girls, college boys, dashing sub-rags, and a variety of complications upon matters are delightfully woven together by witty lines, and quippish repartee. The play is replete with "situations" each more intricate, and more riotside splitting than the preceding.

The scene opens in the parlor of a New York hotel where Robert Ridgeway, played by Donald Meek, declares his love for Agnes Colt, played by Gertrude Bixley. One of the conditions imposed upon Agnes by the heroine's brother, Horace, a part thoroughly well acted in every respect by Robert Middlemass, is that he go to Yale, from which he was expelled several years previous, and finish his course.

A secret marriage between the pair makes his college days seem love laden, and he shows he has not forgotten all he learned by giving a breakfast for the Duke of Carbondale, who is married to Agnes's sister, and two chorus girls. The Duke's motive in attending this breakfast is a worthy one, however. He wishes Robert's hosts in love with his wife, and wants to earn definitely whether or not Robert is into marrying him for his title or not. The "breakfast scene is the gem of the piece. Cyril Biddulph's acting in the part of the Duke is really the best piece of work in the play, while Lillian Stewart as one of the chorus girls is most charmingly realistic.

The last act takes place on Robert Ridgeway's yacht, the "Corythee," in Long Island Sound. The setting here is a sort of double-decker affair, with the first place in the cabin and on the deck above, simultaneously. Except for the fact that the yacht does not sink to the bottom of the Sound we get the usual thrills of the nautical mishap, which furnishes some very laughable horse-play. Donald Meek, as Dodo, played by William Carleton, and Phoebe Ridgeway, Dorothy Donnelly, as Prince Shirley, make a very delightful pair of second-string lovers.

"On the Quiet" is not only well worth seeing. It is your best bet if you miss it.

Keith's Theatre.

High-grade minstrelsy is the headliner, and is scoring a tremendous success at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week.

The "circle" is made up by the Meisner singers, who appear in solos and tuneful choruses, with George Dupree as their soloist. Hugh Dougherty and John Healy on the ends, while Harry K. Morton is interlocutor. Every performer in the circle is an expert in his particular line, and the selections include the favorites of long ago as well as songs of more modern origin. The first part offerings are sustained with such a swing that the house is in a state of constant uproar of laughter and applause.

Sig. Provato, the Filipino violinist, is another great favorite on the bill this week, his skill as a performer and happy choice of selections making a decided hit with the audience. Sig. Provato also has a wonderful power of facial expression which adds to the tremendous interest being taken in his artistic work.

Mesmerick, with a mysterious ball of fat that writes unseen on large sheets of white paper, also is attracting more than usual attention. He has a very strong influence that controls the ball, its efficiency seemed to be doubled.

John Neff and Carr Starr are winning a good hand with their snappy skit, the dialogue being bright and the songs really humorous.

The Webster Cullison and Lucy K. Villa company, with Miss Marie Young, Charles H. Morrell and Alf P. Dewitt in the cast, presents the farce "Miss-Mated" with telling effect. It contains innumerable laugh-provoking situations. The Jolson sisters, in clever sharp-shooting and sister-love stunts, and Duff and Walsh in a dancing specialty round out the well balanced bill. The daylight motion pictures are unusually good this week.

Creatore's Band.

Successfully launched on the second week of his engagement in this city, Creatore, with his band is nightly entertaining fine throngs of music lovers at the American League Baseball Grounds on Huntington avenue. Not only is Creatore a remarkably gifted conductor but his band is a company of excellent musicians and the programme which he presents are of all round interest.

Feature of tonight's performance will be Italian night in Dublino and that old time favorite "The Bugle Calls." Also quite the heavy rain of yesterday after noon did not keep the people away but changed to its opposite. This is one of the most unique entertainments ever offered in Boston and Casilli-Ann's Bombardino, who is responsible for the Signor Creatore, Italian Caprice, Tschaikowsky.

Creatore's aggregation has for its concert Master Raffaelo Rotondi, an excellent bugle Like Creatore, whose first name is by the way, is Giuseppe, Rotondo has a world-wide reputation as a musician of good judgment and talent.

Gloucester Trips.

The sail along the North Shore to Gloucester makes one of the most attractive water trips out of Boston, and at this season of the year the Gloucester boats are carrying their full capacity of passengers.

Satellite Trips.

The fishing season is on as the steamer Satellite proves to its passengers. The daily trips make one of the best outings imaginable.

Globe Theatre.

There was more than the usual amount of mirth in the new program at the Globe Theatre yesterday. Miller and Rosedell, in a sketch called The Lunatic and the Girl caught the fancy of the audience from the start with its comedy. Mitchell and Grant, in another pleasing act, were also received. Besides the illustrated ballads and other vaudeville features, there was a long list of new motion pictures.

Orpheum Theatre.

Among the leaders in the new show at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday were Mc Rae and Kramer, in a black-face act that was made up of songs and dances. It proved a unique act. Burk and Loudon exhibited a few new tricks in comedy, mingled with delicious comedy. Several other features and new pictures completed the bill.

Bass Point.

All of the features that make a shore resort a success are found at Bass Point this season and added to these are an unusually good assortment of hotels, where shore dinners may be had. The Bass Point boat, which also conducts to Nahant and the new recreation pier at Revere Beach, is having a busy year.

Norumbega Park.

The Village Choir, the leading feature at the open air theatre in Norumbega Park this week, made a capital impression on the big audience yesterday afternoon. Other vaudeville features were Hixley and Lenger, the Paul Aaron Trio, accordeon artists, Meid and Morton and the Varneys, in a musical novelty.

Paragon Park.

The Palm Garden at Paragon Park is now enlivened by a cabaret show, which runs from 9 to 11 every night. Nowhere in Massachusetts is it done to such a degree this, for it is more Bohemian and unconventional than any shore entertainment which has been put on in New England for ever known. There is a wealth of good music in the cool cafe at the Palm Garden.

Scenic Temple.

The new show at the Scenic Temple yesterday contained several vaudeville novelties that were new to Boston. The picture program was also new.

Hub Theatre.

Brindamour, one of the original of stage bill leaders, headed the new bill at the Hub Theatre yesterday with a series of astonishing feats.

Provincetown Trips.

Thousands of sea gulls, which are protected by law, swarm in Provincetown Harbor, and there is a multitude of small, unmolestable robin-like birds at the fish wharf. When the "Dorothy Bradford," the first of the new boats of the Boston and Provincetown Steamboat Company, leaves the harbor, there is almost always a flock of these birds following, greatly to the interest and amusement of the passengers.

Next Week's Plays.

The attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week will be "A Bachelor's Honeymoon."

Scenic Temple will open the season at the Shubert next week, on August 7.

GUARDS FIRE ON CLEVELAND STRIKERS

CLEVELAND, July 25.—More than sixty shots were exchanged between strikers and guards in a garment strikers' riot. Two strikers were wounded and the police made many arrests. The rioting occurred at the home of Charles Sperling, father of Joseph J. Sperling of E. Sperling & Co., cloak makers.

Police reserves, including mounted police, were soon arriving on the scene, by liberal clubbing put an end to the riot.

LAURIER "DEFI" ON RECIPROCITY

OTTAWA, Ont., July 25.—"Permit a vote to be taken in Parliament on reciprocity or we will take a vote of the Canadian people upon it without delay." was the ultimatum which Prime Minister Sir Wilfred Laurier delivered to the Conservative opposition to Parliament.

The chief obstacle to the holding of a general election to which the Premier referred is the fact that under the census which is just being taken, Western Canada will be entitled to twenty or more additional members in Parliament. The census will not be completed until October and a law giving the West its increased representation cannot be passed for some weeks after that.

If an election is held before the law is enacted the West will be under-represented in Parliament for at least four years and the political leaders believe will show its resentment to the party which it holds responsible.

Fifty-five Still to Speak.

With this situation confronting them there was a sharp debate when considerations of the agreement was resumed.

A. S. Middleboro, (Conservative) and there remained fifty-five Conservatives who had not spoken on reciprocity and who had the right to speak without obstruction being charged. He declared the government should have taken the initiative two months earlier. If an election is called before the House had been given the representation by which it was entitled he asserted the government would be responsible for the result.

"My honorable friend," replied Premier Laurier, "tries to convince the House and the country that the opposition is not obstructing. Neither the census nor redistribution is before the House to-day, and we cannot go on with them. But reciprocity is before the House to be dealt with. If gentlemen opposite wish to avoid an election, let us go on with reciprocity, and there will be no election. We do not want reciprocity to suit ourselves. We do not want reciprocity to suit the West. It to pass either in this House or before the country. There are the people ever in to judge between the government and the opposition.

The Premier's Threat.

"The opposition say they want an election, but when we take steps to have one they protest. But we understand this. The last thing the Conservatives want is to go before the people of Canada in opposition to this question in an election. Well, I want it; but any way for them to escape that is not to be taken on the reciprocity and pass it so the Canadian farmers will have to the free access to the great market for their crops this year."

Opposition Leader Borden replied that as Canada had practically got all it asked for reciprocity, it could afford to wait six months longer and allow redistribution to give the West its proper representation.

Finance Minister Fielding said that for months the Conservatives had been shouting that the people should be allowed to declare themselves on the question of reciprocity. To-day, he said, the Conservatives had shown that the last thing in the world they desired was to be dragged before the electors on this issue.

President Taft, he added, loyally had carried out his undertaking to further reciprocity in Congress. If he passed the Senate, and Canada can have it for the taking.

"Farmer Wants Reciprocity."

"The Western farmer wants reciprocity," said Mr. Fielding; "but I believe he wants reciprocity and the American market more."

"Reciprocity is a good thing for the whole country. It is a good thing for the Canadian manufacturer to-day. We have achieved reciprocity without important concessions in manufactured articles. But let me give a word of advice to Canadian manufacturers who, needlessly alarmed, are opposing reciprocity. I believe they are doing an injury to their own interests as well as those of Canada.

"If these manufacturers succeed in preventing a great new market being opened to the farmers of Canada, there will arise in the western country a storm cloud which will grow until the end will be a change in the fiscal policy of Canada which is not now contemplated.

W. D. HOWELLS ON FRANCONIA

Eleven hundred people set sail for England to-day on board Boston's newest and biggest liner, the Franconia, and there were no happier persons among the lot. Holiday seeking throng that two men who refuse to grow old—William Dean Howells, the author, and Bishop John J. Harkins of Providence—There were crowds of friends to see these men safely started on their voyage. Bishop Harkins is bound for Rome.

"It is an unofficial visit that I shall make," said the Bishop. "But I shall, of course, see the Holy Father while I am there. My trip is just a rest-seeking at this time, though I am feeling in the best of health and I am looking forward to my trip like a schoolboy on vacation."

Bishop Harkins was for so many years at St. Augustines Church, South Boston, and at St. James's Church, South End, that he considers himself quite a Bostonian, and there were many of his former parishioners present at the pier.

Howells to Visit Wales.

Mr. Howells is to spend his vacation in Wales, at the former home of his father.

"It's a strange thing," said Mr. Howells, "that although I have been abroad many times, I have been to the home of my father but once before, and then for but a short time. This year I intend to spend most of my summer there, and of course I shall write something about what I see in Wales."

Miss Helen Tracy of Ashmont was left behind, but after the boat had warped out into the stream she was seen running down the wharf with a porter tearing along after with a valise.

Picked up to the office of the company, she cried:

"Please put me aboard; it is imperative that I have all my clothes on the ship."

Mr. Howells did not care to take the risk of putting her on from a tug, for the Franconia is pretty high from the water and there would have been great danger. Arrangements will be made to have her sail from New York.

Among other prominent persons sailing on the boat were Bank Commissioner and Mrs. Arthur M. Chase, who will make a six weeks' tour of England; Railroad Commissioner George W. Blaney, who is going to Europe primarily on a two months' vacation but who will also study railroad conditions there.

Councillor Kenny Sails.

Councillor Thomas J. Kenny and his sister, Miss Julia F. Kenny, left for a two months' tour of the British Isles.

C. A. Lidell and his wife and two daughters were also passengers. Mr. Lidell is a British government agent who has been in Cuba for a number of years and is returning home.

William E. Sullivan, Mrs. Sullivan and Miss Sullivan of Winchester will make an extended tour of the principal cities of England.

Mrs. Pierson Beebe, Mrs. William M. Brewer, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Buckley, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bailey, Miss S. H. Crocker, Miss Margaret Crocker, Lyneham Crocker, Harrison L. Deery, Mrs. Deery, Miss Margaret Deery, Miss Ellse Deery, Mr. and Mrs. William Firth, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mr. Russell Norton, Mrs. Norton, A. W. Perry and John F. Wheelright are booked from Boston.

Also sailing were William F. Codman, Robert Bennett Jones, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. and Mrs. J. W. G. Sullivan of Providence, Lieutenant-Colonel Faithful, a British army officer, and Miss Faithful, Dr. C. F. Read, King and Dr. Fred C. Kleiber of Portland, Dr. Fred C. Fisher of Portland, Mrs. Pierce of Milton.

Rudolf C. Fisher, the blind inventor of this city, with his wife and daughter, Miss Mary A. Fisher, a concert stenographer, left on the steamer for a two months' European tour.

EDUCATORS FORM NO-SMOKING LEAGUE

NEW YORK, July 25.—The Non-Smoking Protective League of America, of which Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Professor Burt G. Wilder of Cornell University, Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse University and President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University are directors, was incorporated to-day. Two previous attempts to incorporate failed owing to defects in the papers.

COMMONS WAR SPLITS TORIES

LONDON, July 25.—One result of the remarkable scene of disorder in the House of Commons, when Premier Asquith was howled down until, finding it was hopeless of futile attempts, he was forced to abandon his speech, is an increase of sympathy and support for home rule for Ireland. The anti-home rule men were among the principal offenders in the demonstration which forced the premier to adjourn the House, and their actions met with strong disapproval to-day.

There is a report in circulation here that there is a well defined conspiracy among the more radical Tories to depose Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne from the leadership of the party. The plan proposal is to substitute for them Austen Chamberlain and Lord Selborne.

That the pollitest effect of the boisterous events will be far reaching is admitted by all factions. King George is watching the situation closely and is using his influence to bring about a settlement.

The demonstration was wholly unexpected and all Conservatives recognize that the party is facing a serious crisis, one which may split the party and leave it, instead of a strong minority, a hopeless minority.

The extremists in the Unionist party propose to give a show of their strength in the dinner to the Earl of Halsbury, Hugh Cecil, E. Smith is arranging for tomorrow. Mr. Smith said to-day that he has the acceptance of 100 peers, including the Duke of Marlborough, the great land owner, the Duke of Bedford; the Duke of Somerset, the Marquis of Salisbury and the Earl of Selborne. If the party splits as a result of the present situation the extremists probably will make the Earl of Selborne their leader. They find their chief inspiration in Joseph Chamberlain, whose son Austen will figure prominently at the dinner.

While the "last ditchers" are making up their minds the real influential members of the Conservative party stand with Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Balfour for a peaceful settlement. Among the latter are Lord Cromer, who talk little, but have long means power, and notably the Duke of Devonshire, whose forefathers were traditionally looked to for guidance in national emergencies. The Duke of Portland, the Duke of Richmond, Baron Rothschild, Baron Revelstoke, Baron Desborough, Viscount Goschen and Viscount St. Aldwyn.

Probably a week will elapse before the veto bill is brought up again in the House of Commons. It is thought in the meantime will negotiate with the Unionist leaders for guarantees that the Lords will accept the bill. Unless he obtains these the bill goes back to the House of Lords until the last resort, the creation of 500 new peers, has been invoked to secure its passage.

The Liberal leaders are changing the programme which probably will take the form of a great dinner in Mr. Asquith's honor to express resentment at his treatment.

MAY PEEL $15,000,000 FROM BANANA TRUST

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—A statement of claim to recover $15,000,000 damages has been filed in the United States Court here by the Boston Fruit Company against the United Fruit Co. The Bluefields Co. claims damages in this suit for alleged stifling of competition and alleged monopoly in the sale of bananas. The company's suit was brought under the Sherman anti-trust law.

No Love Like the Old Love

It is certainly exasperating just as you are about to start on your vacation, to have your fall you at the last minute! Of course, you can take another one along, but you certainly will miss the old love. There's comfort, however, in knowing that Wilson Bros. will be but all up while you're away and loan you a watch to carry during recess. Are you having trouble? Bear in mind that WILSON BROS., the Bolla-lay at Jewelers, have 10 skilled watchmakers and do one of the largest watch repairing businesses in Boston. Their main store, next to the Big Teakettle, is a safe place to trade. Open eve.

BOSTON PARTY IN TOY SHOP

NUREMBERG, July 25.—The Boston Chamber of Commerce party inspected the industrial, supplemental or continuation schools in this famous old German city today. Among other places visited was a toy factory, which is the largest in the world. Tens of thousands of American children get at Christmas or other times toys made in this plant. Its products go to all parts of the world, but it has no better market than the United States, to which its exports every year amount to $1,500,000 or more.

Nuremberg is an exceedingly ancient and interesting place in every respect, and the Bostonians who arrived Sunday night, have found every moment enjoyable. Early Monday morning after a visit to the mediaeval part of the city which still looks about as it did in the middle ages, the old streets and buildings are all quaint, and to walk through the former is like being able to glimpse at close hand ages of the past.

Visit to Museums.

The party saw the Kaiserstrasse, the Castle, the historic churches, the Germanic museum, the homes of Durer, the famous engraver, and of Hans Sachs, who was both cobbler and poet.

One of the most noted institutions of Nuremburg is the Bavarian Trade Institute, where instruction is given in all the trades with characteristic German thoroughness, and the Bostonians looked over it yesterday all day. They also examined the exhibits in the Royal Traffic Museum, which contains models illustrating the various types of locomotives, cars, rails and other equipment used for the purpose of methods of transportation, together with a collection of devices, which, by comparison, illustrate progress in recent years.

Study Housing Problem.

Nuremburg is a city where much attention has been given to the development and planning of the buildings in the most comfortable and sanitary way. The visitors from Boston have taken many notes in this line of endeavor which will be very impressive.

The Bostonians left for Munich at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Fred J. Ortlange, special correspondent of the Boston HERALD, is writing a big series about what he sees on the European trip, the first article in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

BLOODHOUNDS ON TRAIL OF ROBBERS

NEW YORK, July 25.—Bloodhounds are aiding the detectives searching for the highwaymen who made an attempt to wreck a Long Island railroad train near Valley Stream, from a driver engineer train provided with pleasure seekers who speeding to this city when Engineer Hilford saw an obstruction on the track. He threw on the brakes, reversed the engine and brought the train to a stop within fifteen feet of the obstruction.

WORCESTER HILL CLIMB IS NEXT

By J. C. KERRISON.

The only hill climb scheduled at present is the Dead Horse climb at Worcester, Mass., which will be held on Saturday, August 12, under the auspices of the Worcester Automobile Club. Nothing better emphasizes the interest being shown in the climb than the way entries are being received. Entry blanks were issued only last week, and to date there are nearly sixty cars entered for the various events. Motorcycle entries also are coming in at a lively rate.

The committee has announced that A. D. Convers, president of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association, will be the referee and that the usual skill and starter.

In addition to the events scheduled for cars eligible to compete in the various classes open to stock and pneumock machines as prescribed for in the 1911 A. A. A. contest rules, there will be free-for-all events and a special amateur event. In the amateur contest, which is for the Worcester County championship trophy, only local owners will be permitted to compete. The deed of gift for this prize stipulates that it must be won three times in succession by the same driver for permanent owner ship. Jay Clark, Jr., has won it twice. There will be an exhibition event for commercial cars and trucks and also for motorcycles, strong and electric propelled machines. Amateurs will be permitted to drive in any event provided the cars comply with the requirements of class and di vision, for each class specified prizes for amateurs will be awarded in each class.

The highway connecting the Franconia and Crawford notches through the heart of the White Mountains is to be greatly improved, being made wider and better in every way. It is to be known as the Anderson boulevard, and will be a memorial to John Anderson, who devoted his life to White Mountain interests, and was one of the first men to encourage motor touring in the White Mountain district.

It is appropriate that this stretch of road should be chosen to honor Mr. Anderson's memory. In 1902 he planned the first trip over this route, which is now a State road, and each year of the road dedication tablets will be placed and a patrol system will be established to care for it.

It is interesting to note that in Florida there is being built a boulevard 300 miles in length and running the length of the east coast from Jacksonville, which is to be called Anderson boulevard. The section between Jacksonville and St. Augustine has been completed, and the remainder is now under way.

New Hampshire has made up its mind not to be outdone by Florida and Mr. Anderson's friends have appointed a committee, of which W. S. Keazy, manager of the Mount Washington Hotel in Bretton Woods, is chairman. C. W. Seamans, president of the United Typewriter Company, is also a member, and they, together with the other members, are at work collecting subscriptions to carry out the work. At Mr. Anderson's death New Hampshire's greatest promoter of touring and road building will be lacking, but such a memorial should be dedicated to him.

KNOWS WHAT CURED HER

This Maine Woman Does Not Hesitate to Recommend the Remedy She Used.

A high endorsement is given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by Mrs. Albert Emanent, of No. 124 Palm street, Bangor, Maine. She says:

"For fully eight months I was in a general run down condition. My appetite was poor and I would feel faint at my stomach. I was so short of breath that I couldn't walk much, and lost several pounds in weight and could not do my housework. It was a burden for me to get around and many people would have given up and gone to bed. My blood was in a poor condition and a rash broke out all over my body.

"I was under the doctor's care but their help was so slow that I gave up taking their medicine and used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In two weeks I felt better and in all continued using the pills I increased until I was cured. I gave no other medicine while using the pills and give them the credit for the cure. A great many people, who know how ill I was, have asked me what cured me and I am constantly recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

To avoid ill health and suffering at the critical time, a woman should make every effort to keep the blood rich, and in the best possible condition. If you are approaching the fortieth year or already passing through the change and your system is not strong enough to bear the strain, you can get no more certain or quick relief than by using a thorough trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They quickly build up and purify the blood, which, in turn, tones and invigorates every nerve and every other part of the body until robust health is enjoyed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are guaranteed to be safe and harmless to the most delicate constitution. They do not act on the bowels but they actually make new blood and strengthen the nerves. If you want good health you must have good blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

5,000 MELONS FOR "AD MEN"

Joys. Five thousand joys. Great, big, juicy, pink-centred, joy-of-joy-joys are coming to the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, which opens in Boston Aug. 1. In fact, these particular joys are already being picked and crated "down in dear old Georgia to-day."

Think of it! Five thousand great, big, luscious Georgia watermelons, and every one of them for the 5,000 ad men from all parts of the United States, Canada, London and Porto Rico, who are coming to the biggest convention of advertising men ever held.

An old-time Southern melon cutting is to be one of the convention features. It's to be a part of the clam bake at Point of Pines on Thursday, August 3. The watermelons are the donation of the Ad Men's Club of Atlanta, Georgia, who will also bring along a carload of peaches. This telegram was received by the committee to-day:

"Five thousand best Georgia watermelons ready for Boston convention. Will be shipped in special car. Details later."

It's a Great Movement.

George W. Coleman, president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association, in speaking of the coming convention to-day, said: "This gathering of the advertising clans in Boston is a great get-together movement. It is quite in harmony with the spirit of the times. Some great centripetal force in modern society seems to be driving men together, whether they will or not. It is manifest in every direction in which you look. Even competitors are getting together. We are finding out that co-operation will accomplish some things that are impossible to competition.

"Many who have held aloof from the movement will be identified with the coming convention. The presence of advertising men from foreign countries will lend a cosmopolitan aspect to the occasion. A greater variety of advertising will be represented almost every conceivable phase of advertising.

"All this has not come about by accident. It was dreamed of by far-sighted men. It has cost immense toil and service on the part of agents—men through a succession of years, who would not give up in spite of many discouragements. They were impelled by a force which no one can describe or explain—this centripetal force which is telling men in all the walks of life: 'You must get together.'

Many Advertising Clubs.

"It began in various localities widely scattered and unrelated to each other. Russell R. Whitman, now publisher of the Boston AMERICAN, started the ball a-rolling out in Kansas City. Chicago was very early in the field with its Agate Club. And so they followed each other in quick succession in various cities all over the country, until now there are several score of them.

"It has cost ten years of unremitting, toil, undiminished optimism and unconsidered zeal to put the Pilgrim Publicity Association where it is to-day, and it has only just begun to do its real work. It has taken almost as many years to bring the national association to the point of development where it is now prepared to do a mighty work in advancing the commercial life of the nation.

"The contest for the next convention which was started with a boom by Dallas, Texas, from which State a delegation of ad men to occupy a special train of fifteen cars, is coming to the convention in Boston, has been followed by a dozen other convention delegates for convention honors. The Quebec admen say that a national convention has never been held in Canada and that it should go to Quebec as the first place of Canada. If points points out that it is the finest convention city in America with a drill shed where 5,000 men can be accodated and where eight railway and steamship lines accord access to the city.

Other cities which have put in bids for convention honors are St. Paul, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Washington and Baltimore.

GALE HALTS YACHT CRUISE OF 27 YEARS

NEW YORK, July 25.—A southwest gale sweeping down Long Island sound interrupted the world-cruise of twenty-seven years that James B. Haggin announced he would undertake when he left Egypt in his luxurious gasoline yacht, Lonnger II. When word reached New Haven that the yacht had not put in there pedestrians said still more possibly had obliged to seek some shelter in the lower sound to await better weather.

FINAL Clean-up

33 DAYS MORE

At This Address

Must Vacate Sept. 1

THE time is growing short — we cannot afford to consider any phase of the situation but our urgent necessity for absolute and quick clearance; prices are down to a point where in some cases not even half of our actual cost is covered. Do you wonder last week's selling smashed all records?

We Are Not Going to Leave BOSTON

We have not yet announced a new location because landlords have been boosting rents above the point where we could continue giving the values for which we are famous. But they are coming our way now—and we expect to be able to announce a new location shortly. WE ARE NOT GOING TO LEAVE BOSTON even if we have to take TEMPORARY quarters.

All $10 and $12 Suits...	$5
All $15 and $16.50 Suits	$7.50
All $18 and $20 Suits..	$9.50
All $25 and $26.50 Suits	$12.50
All $28 and $30 Suits..	$14.50
All $35 and $40 Suits..	$16.50

Everything in the store goes at the extraordinary sacrifices. This MUST be an absolute clearance. Sack Suits, Coats and Trousers, Walking, Prince Albert, Dress and Tuxedo Suits, Overcoats, Raincoats, etc. — not only in Summer weights, but are included in this Final Clean-up at about one-third of their actual value. It will pay you handsomely to buy now for next season.

All Winter Weight and Fur-Lined Overcoats

ENGLISH SPORTING MEN BEING BADLY FOOLED
BY HUGH M'INTOSH

JIM FLYNN CAN'T MAKE WEIGHT

By ED. W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, July 25.—If Jim Flynn can make something like the middle-weight limit he is going to get a chance at Billy Papke. Just "something like" limit is all.

"If Flynn doesn't weigh 185 pounds in good condition I'll be the most surprised man in the world," Papke said the other evening before departing for his Kewanee home. On the side it may be mentioned that Papke and Flynn look enough alike to be easily mistaken for each other when they are apart.

"That was one of the first things I read on the front when we were approaching New York harbor," the middle-weight champion said, "and the fact that he had issued a challenge to me was a big stiff price, too. I know him as even something more than a light heavy-weight. He is a full-fledged heavy, or I miss my guess by a wide margin.

Boxed Flynn Twice.

"I boxed Flynn twice in ten-round engagements and I know exactly everything about him, including his left. He couldn't fool me much on that feature and my past experience can tell within a few pounds of a man's weight after he has strolled around with him for ten rounds or so. That's why I think I have such a good line on the Flynn chap.

"The first time I boxed him was on March 10, 1909, and I had a fair shade the better of the work all the way to the end. The following July they induced me to box him again. It was a match I never should have taken because on July 5 I battled Stanley Ketchel in a twenty-round engagement and nine days later I was right back fighting with Flynn.

"After one had gone twenty rounds with Ketchel he knew something had happened and that was the way I felt. My left and My right arm was so stiff at the elbow that I could merely chin with it and hitting effectively was out of all question. I had the better of the first six rounds by a wide margin and then fell away. Flynn is one of those fellows who is always coming at you without a let up and with a comfort that is surprising. Not being in condition, I had to make a defensive fight of it at the finish.

"That's what gives me the idea that he can beat me. I haven't any such idea, but I won't battle him again unless he shows me that he is at least close to 160 pounds.

"Since I can find more than enough men in my own class to keep me busy I am not going out of my way to battle heavyweights. The big boys are for Jeffries, but all of the other might heavyweights in Flynn is a great man undoubtedly, but he isn't a middleweight."

Caponi After Papke.

Tom Cassel's manager, Lanny Lawrence, is on the job and has Caponi signed and willing to pit the Italian fighter against Papke, Hugo Kelly or any other middleweight who is looking for an interesting game. He would even consent to have the battle decided on a newspaper decision if there was no other way of getting it.

Barney Gimpel is also looking against Jim Flynn and Sam Langford more than anxious to get a crack at the Kewanee man for the title. Three times Caponi has covered the Illinois lad's path and the two engagements were even breaks, although several of the newspaper critics expressed themselves as being surprised by the second meeting. The third encounter was a draw. Tom Cassel has scaled in at 147 pounds, under the impression that the middleweight limit is set at 147 pounds, but Caponi has been known to make 158 pounds. Tony usually has to reduce considerably to show that he is gently increased and strong. Four victories in succession over George La Page, six rounds; won from Fred McLaggen, seven rounds; won from Eddie McGorty, twenty rounds; won from Arthur McLaughlin, six rounds, and from Jack Ryan, nine rounds; won from Kid Graves, ten rounds; drew with Jack Root, twelve rounds; drew with Eddie McGorty, ten rounds, and defeated Al Johnson, ten rounds; lost to Jim Flynn, nine rounds, no decision with Sam Langford, ten rounds.

GRAVES TO COACH.

LARAMIE, Wyo., July 25.—Graves, the sprightly and hard-hitting left fielder of the Laramie baseball team, has been made athletic director of the University of Wyoming at a salary of $2000 a year, and will train for the position at Battle Creek, Mich.

M'INTOSH FOOLS ENGLISH SPORTS

By RILEY.

Abraham Lincoln once said: "You can fool some people all the time, you can fool all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time."

But it is not so with Hugh McIntosh, the Australian fight promoter. For some months McIntosh has been fooling practically all of the English sporting people all of the time. The promoter from the land of the kangaroo now plans to pull off several fights, with McIntosh as one of the principals, which, to be staged in this country, he would be liable to be haled into court charged with using the mails to carry or for obtaining money under false pretenses.

And yet the English people look upon McIntosh as a great sporting promoter. They have yet to awake. Every time that McIntosh puts the ball upon the tee they swallow bait, hook, sinker and all. And yet they call for more.

McIntosh now intends to have Johnson and Petty Officer Curran, of Dublin, a week from the coming Saturday. Judging from reports received from the other side of the big stream a $30,000 house will witness the affair. But what would happen in this country it would be almost impossible to get a correct line on. Perhaps Curran and Johnson would have to practically give the tickets away.

Tom Gomes "Hope" Wells.

After the Curran-Johnson fight (?) McIntosh plans to have the Galveston black meet Bombardier Wells. And there are plenty of Englishmen who look upon Gomes as a real "hope." They have "dabbled" themselves into the belief that Bombardier Wells is the real thing. Knock-out Wells.

Wells was unable to knock out Porky Flynn, but he may get his chance to do it in a twenty-round affair over in England a few months ago. And certainly ever so good Porky of being better than a second rater. But, at any rate, if McIntosh can dispose of Flynn, what chance has he against Johnson, with Johnson's record? Absolutely none at all.

By the time the Johnson-Wells fight has taken place McIntosh thinks that he will have had enough of England. The confidently English sports should have enough of McIntosh, and as a result he is going back to Australia where Johnson will meet Bill Lange and several other has-beens and never-weres.

Right followers will remember that Sam Langford, the boy with the trip hammer punch, gave Lange an awful whipping over in London last Winter. Before the battle McIntosh had Lange "framed" to the only safe finish, knocked-out, and in the word "white man's hope." The Englishman is getting fatherly stuff for it with the result that a packed house saw the alleged champion knocked out.

Nix on the "Go West" Stuff.

It has now got to the place where the third and fourth raters from this country go over to the other side advertised as champions. England's fighters once in a while defeat these men. Consequently English sports have got the idea that they have some real fighting looking about the little island. And Hugh McIntosh is there with them in their belief, not forgetting to take away their good money as alleged bonuses.

Horace Greeley once said: "Go West, young man, go West." At the time the land beyond the muddy Mississippi was the land of fortune. But that advice is now taken by England. At any rate this is true as far as fighters are concerned. But you may get away with the stunt even if you are only a second or ordinary every day bank clerk. At any rate there's nothing like trying.

So if you want some easy money go to England, say you are a fighter, Hugh McIntosh will boost your name, and you will undoubtedly return home to take country richer may by several thousands of dollars in the currency of the good King George.

It looks as though Pal Moore had bit off a bigger chunk than he will be able to swallow when he agreed to meet Ad Wolgast in a six-round bout in Philadelphia on Labor Day. It is true that Pal is a wonderfully clever boy, but Ad Wolgast fights like he has in his recent bouts here in the East and out on the coast the Philadelphia youngster will have to know something else besides merely boxing.

Ad will get $8,000 for his end of the purse.

Al Kubiack is scheduled to meet Joe Jeanette on the Fourth of July, but while Joe does not put the Michigan giant away inside of the limit he will be able to get another match with Sam Langford for some time. Jeanette has been trying to get a go with the Boston "Tar Baby." But on every occasion Sam has told Joe to go out and beat some good man first. If Jeanette defeats Kubiack tonight, Sam may decide that Joe is about ripe for another engagement.

"Al Delmont is running away from my boy, Packey Callahan," says Tom McCarthy. Callahan is one of the best lightweights in this country at the present. And Al Delmont is another cooking little mill dispenser. From what I can learn about I am sure he won't let this go by unchallenged. A bout between Callahan and Delmont should be a hummer. Some interesting propaganda will undoubtedly be the pair together once the "nothing doing" signs are taken down.

After he gets through with his present engagements in England Jack Johnson will make a tour of the far East, and end up by going to Australia, where he hopes Bill Lang. While in the East Johnson will give exhibition boxing matches, and in places where boxing is prohibited he will give a lecture on physical culture. I am still wondering what dialect Jack will use when addressing an audience of stunt eyed Mongolians in central China or a music hall full of wily Japs.

CONNIE MACK IS A MODEST MAN

By BILL BAILEY.

Connie Mack is modest.

Connie Mack is very modest.

In fact, the leader of the world's champion Athletics is exceedingly modest. And here is an example: Connie, you know, is strictly in this race for the pennant of the American League. He is a few games behind the Tigers, who are playing great baseball. The leader of the present champions was in his hotel.

"Well, who will win the pennant?" he was asked.

"Pretty hard to answer that question," was his answer.

"Will the Tigers win it?"

"I don't think so," was his answer.

"Will the Sox win it?"

"Well, I don't think so," was his answer.

"Will the Naps win it?"

"In my opinion they will not," was his answer.

"New York or Boston?"

"No," was his answer.

Refuses to Claim Anything.

That's modesty between the Athletics and the St. Louis Browns. And no one has an idea for a moment that the Browns will land in the Athletics. Figuring in the way you interview Connie. By the way of elimination. You see, Connie doesn't want to claim something which he hasn't claimed. That's how modest he is. He is absolutely convinced that the Athletics will repeat.

But when it comes to point Connie tells you seven clubs which will not win. The seven clubs which will not lose is the Philadelphia outfit. Therefore, they must win the pennant. Simple, isn't it, Connie?

You know the Tigers gave us trouble a couple of days ago when the Philadelphia lads journeyed to Detroit. In fact, it was the Tigers who gave Christy Mathewson's crew of Braves pulled away from the one they by the elongated boss of the world's champs.

Is a Good Sportsman, Too.

"What's the matter?" Connie was asked.

No, he didn't claim that he got the worst of the umpiring. He wouldn't do that. He's a pretty good sportsman this fellow who sells the champions what to do.

"Well, our pitchers were bad to begin with," said Mr. Mack. "We would get away out in front and then the pitchers would blow. We played enough fine ball in the first three games. But prosperity seemed to be too much for our pitchers, and the latter gave up a big lead they lost whatever effectiveness they had.

"Then we struck the Tigers at the worst time. They were playing great baseball; they were playing baseball that may be they were playing ahead of their stride, and the Detroit outfit got hot for it with the result that a packed house saw the alleged champions knocked out.

Nix on the "Go West" Stuff.

After he gets through with his present engagements in England Jack Johnson will make a tour of the far East, and end up by going to Australia, where he hopes Bill Lang. While in the East Johnson will give exhibition boxing matches, and in places where boxing is prohibited he will give a lecture on physical culture. I am still wondering what dialect Jack will use when addressing an audience of stunt eyed Mongolians in central China or a music hall full of wily Japs.

BATTLE ON FOR PITCHER O'TOOLE

CINCINNATI, July 25.—A statement issued here by John J. McGraw, manager of the New York National League team, to the effect that the Pittsburg club would not obtain the services of Pitcher Marty O'Toole of St. Paul without a fight, was backed up by a certified check from the New York club for $15,000, made out to the secretary of the National Baseball Commission.

Accompanying the check was a letter from President John T. Brush of the New York club, explaining that President Lennon of the St. Paul club entered into a verbal agreement with New York for the sale of O'Toole for $15,000 and that he desired to lay claim to the player.

Though O'Toole was sold to the Pittsburg club for the price named, up to midnight the national commission had not been informed of the sale.

Horse News and Stable Gossip

Trainer Dan King has been a mile in 2:23 with the green trotting mare May Worthen. May is the little bay mare has a lot of lick

D. W. Caton has not commenced to test up the green pacer he recently purchased from Al Readville, but says that they are working to please him.

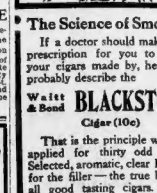
Stote Fleecher of Indianapolis has bought a gelding, 5 years old, by Peter, and the trotter is now in Lou McDonald's stable.

The pacer record of New England tracks last season as the The Arrow, 2:16¼, has been lowered to 2:14¼ by Diamond, 2.08. He is now one of the mainstays performers at Dan Patch Park, Minneapolis.

The Camden, Me., trotting mare Lady Tilly looks to be one of the real promising green trotters of the Pine Tree state. Jimmy Carpenter let the big daughter of Todd (2.14¼) step and she turned off a mile in 2:14¾, in a way to please the most critical.

Dr. Jesse Humphreyville says that there is at Johnson Farm a two months old colt that is the greatest trotting prospect he has yet been foaled. It is by King Todd, son of Todd (2.14¼) and Nancy Hanks (2.04). The little chap will do nothing but trot and the Doctor says that he thinks the youngester of the age that could show anywhere near the speed of this one.

There has been a lot of opinion as to which of the several candidates for championship honors was the best horse. This could easily be settled by giving a race open to horses that have started in harness the present season. Of the near dozen that will be eligible to the Grand Circuit stakes next season, Dan Patch, Minor Heir, Peter the Great, Directum, Cresceus, Walter Direct, and other cracks would be entered.



The Science of Smoking

If a doctor should make up a prescription for you to order your cigars made by, he would probably describe the

Waitt & Bond BLACKSTONE Cigar (10c)

That is the principle we have applied for thirty odd years. Selected, aromatic, clear Havana for the filler — the true base of all good tasting cigars. The best of light domestic binder. A wrapper of filmy, neutral flavored Sumatra. Made by skilled men in a model, sanitary factory.

That's the kind of smoke normal men enjoy. If you don't enjoy it your taste is vitiated by harmfully heavy cigars. Smoking a Waitt & Bond BLACKSTONE will benefit your whole nervous system, including the pocket nerve.

WOLGAST OUT TO SUBDUE BRITONS

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

Wolgast has already disposed of one crack Britisher. Now he is to tackle Freddie Welsh. If he should get by Freddie and then defeat Willie Ritchie, he will have accomplished more in the way of subduing John Bull's pugilistic representatives than any lightweight champion this country has developed.

But Welsh does not think he is marked for defeat and Freddie says that while he was disappointed in the showing Owen Moran made, he hardly expected Moran to win. He knew it was going to be a contest while calling for all the strength the man possessed and he felt that Moran had dissipated too much in his time to put up a strenuous battle.

Welsh Strong in Clinches.

Welsh thinks himself Wolgast's equal in fighting and for that matter he believes he is a greater all around ring man than the lad from Michigan. He hints that if he finds Wolgast is a bit too good for him at close work he will be able to change his tactics. While he believes there is a doubt as to whether he or Wolgast is the better man against, he is confident that he is Ad's master at other styles of milling.

Those who saw Freddie roughing it with Matty Baldwin are free to admit that Welsh proved stronger and more resourceful in the clinches than they expected. He battered Matty with the so-called kidney punch and at the same time made it well nigh impossible for Baldwin to deal return blows of a similar description. Through all Welsh's fighting, Matty failed to land a real punch and thoroughly regained his form.

Nelson Wants Another Go With Ad.

Whether Battling Nelson will be taken seriously or not, it is very evident that he is going to get back into the light-weight swim. Bat is somewhere in the Northwest at present and has figured in several bouts, or, rather, exhibitions. He seems to have made a favorable impression on the sporting writers up that way, a couple of whom had no hesitation in saying that Nelson had thoroughly regained his form.

The one ambition of Bat's life is to get a return match with Ad Wolgast. He will not admit that the Michigan lad is the champion.

"He happened to get me on an off day," said Bat. "I'm going after him again, and feel that I have the edge on the champion. The day is not far distant when Battling Nelson will be once more the lightweight champion of the world."

CONNIE MACK GETS RID OF TWO PLAYERS

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia American League team, has sold Long and Emerson, college players signed this year, to the Louisville Ky., team of the American association. Long, who is a pitcher, made a fine record with the Lafayette College team. Emerson, an outfielder, was secured from the University of California. The money consideration was not made public.

Mack says the youngsters have promising futures but he could not use them this season.

CLEVELAND TEAM BUYS O'NEIL OF WORCESTER

WORCESTER, July 25.—Manager Jesse Burkett of the Worcester team has received from President C. W. Somers of the Cleveland team a letter asking him to purchase the release of O'Neil, the catcher on Burkett's club, who has been signed up by the Cleveland club. Manager Burkett has offered to turn over to Burkett a first baseman, Lafayette College product, or the backstop to the Cleveland club in exchange for O'Neil. Burkett wants a pitcher in addition to a catcher.

MAGEE TO TELL STORY TO LYNCH

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Sherwood Magee, the outfielder of the Philadelphia National League club who was recently suspended for the balance of the 1911 baseball season by President Lynch for his attack on Umpire Finneran, has forwarded a request to the five directors of the National League asking that he be given a hearing. Magee and the officials of the Philadelphia club insist that Mr. Lynch acted hastily in suspending and fining Magee $200.

It is contended that the head of the league heard only the testimony of the umpires who acted during the game in which the row occurred. In order that Magee might have a version of the affair, a special meeting of the board was demanded.

On Saturday, Horace S. Fogel, president of the Philadelphia club, telegraphed to the directors requesting that they take up the matter. Five of the directors, Mr. Fogel said, favored a meeting of the board to consider the case; one reported indefinite; the fourth, from John T. Brush, suggested a mail vote instead of a meeting, and the fifth member of the board has not yet answered the telegram sent him.

The board to which Magee and the club has appealed is composed of Augustus Hermann, Cincinnati; John T. Brush, New York; Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburg; Charles Murphy, Chicago, and Charles Ebbets, Brooklyn.

Mr. Fogel, accompanied by his attorney is in New York to-day, where he probably will take up the matter with Mr. Brush.

OARSMEN FLOCKING TO NATIONAL REGATTA

SARATOGA, July 25.—The local committee in charge of the arrangements for the 20th annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, to be held on Friday and Saturday, is making preparations to handle one of the biggest crowds in Saratoga's history. The course had to be staked out again to-day owing to a severe storm Monday which blew the buoys away.

Quarters have been made ready at the lake and by to-night or Wednesday morning the greater number of the oarsmen will be on the water. Stroke Speed and Fred Kelley of the Harlem Rowing Club are already here and are practicing daily on Lake Lonely, adjoining Saratoga Lake. Both are rounding rapidly into form.

PEORIA, Ill., July 25.—A. E. Lelsey, owner of the Peoria team of the "Three Eye" League announced the sale of Joe Harris, crack southpaw of the team, to Charles Comisky, owner of the Chicago American league club. The consideration is said to have been $4,000. Harris is to report to the Chicago management at Boston Friday.

NEW RANGELEY CLUB.

RANGELEY, Me., July 25.—A motor boat club has been formed to establish a headquarters at this popular summer boat landing on the shores of the lakes. At the meeting held at the Lake House the following officers were elected: Commodore, Dr. Fowler; secretary-treasurer, C. C. Whitney; committee, Alton Wood; fleet captain, M. Wadsworth; chief engineer, Ernest Haley.

KID SCALER IN A MATCH WITH BROWN

WORCESTER, July 25.—Kid Sealer, who terms himself the champion lightweight of the Northwest, announces that he is matched with Kenneth Singh Mc Brown of New York at Webster about the middle of August. He says that he is matched with Battling Nelson Labor Day at Vancouver, B. C., for a purse of $2,500. Sealer is in good trim, having fully recovered from an injury to his hand sustained early in the Summer.

M'GRAW HAPPY OVER INFIELD

McGraw, a crank on speed, is probably now pretty well satisfied with his infield—Merkle, Doyle, Fletcher and Herzog—four of the fastest men in the big leagues.

Having assimilated the difference between a first division club and a tail-ender, Herzog probably has forgotten more than the latter to appreciate the former, and his playing with the Giants is likely to materially improve, fast as he was going here in Boston.

Rumors of further trades are still flying around, and no one knows what McGraw intends to do in the line of dickers until it is done. There is nothing to indicate that the Little Napoleon has anything else in view. There is talk that he got Herzog to pass him along in a three-cornered transaction which will also include Jacobs and perhaps a pitcher, but this does not seem likely.

Boston did not get any of the worst of the Herzog deal. Herzog was useless to the Reds for reasons that are now well known. They are probably still a number of years of good baseball in Birdwell, but even regardless of what Bird does, Boston is likely to find itself repaid for the infielder by the work of Hank Gowdy.

The Texan may turn out to be a second Lindeman. He has demonstrated that he can hit and play the infield each in pretty fair shape.

HOW RUSSELL, PAGE AND MURPHY FEEL IN NEW BALL DEAL

WM. HEPBURN RUSSELL.

FRED J. MURPHY.

"Gee, I'm no longer between the upper and the nether millstone."

GLEASON BUYS RUSTLER STOCK

The financial affairs of the Boston National Club have been rearranged to the satisfaction of William Hepburn Russell, the principal stockholder and president. Fifteen minutes after he had paid L. C. Page for the latter's stock, and acquired him from the local baseball situation, he went into consultation with J. J. Gleason, the Pacific coast fight promoter, and the result was a deal whereby Gleason will, on Thursday, acquire a substantial minority interest in the stock of the club.

Fred J. Murphy, treasurer of the club, will increase his holdings so that with Russell's resolve to control the affairs of the club will be conducted by a triumvirate, Attorney Winslow and Secretary Peter F. Kelley are to retire from the directorate.

First Chance at Stock.

Until Sunday morning Russell had never seen Gleason. On that day Gleason, who came to Boston intending to buy the club outright. He found that Russell would not sell the club, but he made up his mind that Russell was a man with whom he could get along, and he decided to take a minority interest.

The agreement between the two men includes a provision that either shall have the first chance to buy any stock from the other which is for sale.

J. J. Gleason, better known as "Jack" Gleason, has been identified with big fights and athletic affairs on the Pacific Coast for some years. He was forty years of age yesterday. He has been anxious to found into Eastern baseball as an owner of a team for a long time, and he was somewhat disappointed at not being able to purchase the entire stock of the Boston National Club. The last big thing on the Pacific Coast in which Gleason was prominent was the James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson fight, July 4, 1911, in the promotion of which he was a partner with Tex Rickard.

It is Gleason's ambition, he says, to give the city a good ball team and no effort will be spared in building up a club which will gradually gain the prominence which Boston teams of years ago enjoyed.

Barrow Registers Kick.

Baltimore will not obtain a franchise in the National League without precipitating a baseball war between the leagues, according to Edward Barrow, president of the Eastern League, who issued a statement to-night criticising certain members of the National League.

President Barrow said he was "feeling pretty sore" over the manner in which Baltimore was induced to believe that it might get the Boston National League franchise. A transfer would be impossible, he said, unless the national agreement was broken.

"For the president of the National League and several of its club owners have allowed themselves to be ignored as favorites the change," continued President Barrow's statement, "ignoring the Eastern League and its rights entirely in the matter, when in reality the Eastern League is the key to the whole situation and should have been the first one to be consulted.

"Of course there is nothing to prevent the National or any other league going into Baltimore if they desire to break up the present system of organized ball and start another baseball war. They might get in the first punch by landing in Baltimore, but their youth and pugnacity right via Boston, and possibly a couple of the same sort in other parts that would hurt more.

"From the published interviews with several major league magnates on the Baltimore matter, it looks as if the much vaunted protection supposed to be given to the Class A league was a joke. At any rate, the Eastern League does not intend to stand idly by and see its circuit disrupted without a fight to prevent it."

By R. W. LARDNER.

They're in sixth place, but we're glad to see them. Sixth place is only 30 points below third in this case, and 30 points can be blotted out in a couple of days.

The team which is now occupying third is to open a series of three games here this afternoon. If the Red Sox can get three games away from these Chicago boys while Cleveland is doing a losing stunt in Philadelphia, things will look different. New York will be battling the Browns, and there isn't much hope of the Yankees being hurt much by the collision. But you never can tell. Anyhow, it is up to the Red Sox to make Chicago like it, and the other two games will take care of themselves.

The Speed Boys are not in position to do much boasting over their accomplishments in the hostile West. They started all right by whipping the Browns three out of four, and did fairly well at Chicago, getting an even break in six conflicts. Then came Detroit and four straight defeats, and three out of five were dropped in Cleveland. Record for the trip—eight victories and eleven defeats. No team can finish in the first division going at that clip, and there will have to be improvement or a lot of it shown.

Looks Like a Two-Horse Race.

It begins to look like a two-horse race in the American League. Earlier in the season there seemed to be a chance for the Red Sox, White Sox and Yankees. But the Tigers and Athletics have been unable to break their bad habit of finishing—except in the Detroit-Yankee series—and now Chicago, leader of the bunch, is over 150 points behind second place and over 150 from the top.

It appears impossible for New York, Chicago and Boston to get any distance above the .500 mark and stay there. Meanwhile Cleveland has come on like a freight wagon and is on speaking terms with the other three. It's a case of every man for himself and take your choice of four entries in the chase for third position.

Unless something else happens to him the "Chief" are going to have the pleasure of seeing Bill Carrigan in his almost daily performances behind the bat once more. Bill is in shape again, and in good shape that he is in the immediate vicinity of a batting average of .300.

Bill's presence doesn't hurt the Sox a bit. Leslie Dunnakaker and Jack Nykes are undoubtedly there with the ability and the willingness, but Bill has the experience, and the pitchers like to work with him. When he is hitting as he is now, there isn't a catcher in the league who would be better than an even trade for him.

Outfielders Batting Well.

The three outfielders and Utility Man Myers are the only Sox that are actually swatting over .300 at the present writing. Tris Speaker has fallen off a lot, but he had such a height to fall from that it still makes you dizzy to look at him. Tris doesn't often slump, and when he does the slump doesn't last long. It has gone about the limit now, and we expect some noisy hitting by the rangy Texan during the home series.

He is now cracking them out for .326, unofficial figures, and a few days of luck will put him up among the Keelers, Cravaths and Lajoies where he belongs. Harry Hooper and Duffy Lewis are right on Speaker's heels at present. Duff walloping .310 and Harry .305.

That Sunday game in Cleveland wasn't down on the original schedules, because nobody knew until a few weeks ago that Ralph Pasitmng would be permitted at the house of the Napes. The game was moved ahead from the August series and will not have only two games to play in Cleveland. They are ahead of the Naps in the series at Boston, Fenway Park, four, and that gives them an even break on the season's series, so far.

Now that Eddie Cicotte is out of it for the season with his ailing arm, and Allan Travers is undoubtedly there with the ability and the willingness, but Bill has the experience, and the pitchers like to work with him. When he is hitting as he is now, there isn't a catcher in the league who would be better than an even trade for him.

"Eaglebeak" Spruder did not show up at the new baseball scenery, who did the twirling for the Wasps, showed up like a plugged penny alongside of "Micky," the strange kid from the West, who happened to wander along and take "Eaglebeak's" place on the Starfish Giants.

By the way, "Micky" is a wonder. He's the cross-eyed potato is one of "Puggy's" most sacred treasures, and is supposed to be a good luck charm, there is not a doubt in the world that "Micky" is a marvel.

"Micky" disappeared right after the game, disgusted with the whole show. A kid tried to track him to his hiding place and came back bawling. He's a mysterious young cove is "Micky."

Disappointment reigned in the camp of the fans yesterday. There was a good number on hand to bid Emily Morton about "Eaglebeak," but she did not show up. It is now reported that any engagement to him has been broken off. We hope it has been, for the sake of the Starfish Giants and "Skinny" Shaner.

If You Had to Live It Over Again

By DOROTHY DIX

No. 5—The Third Man's Story

"My marriage," said the third man, "is a failure because there is no companionship between myself and my wife. Our marriage has become the very husks of wedlock. The zest of love, and even of friendship has gone, and nothing is left but the body of the thing from which the spirit has fled.

"Some cynic said not long ago that the other advantage in being rich was that the wealthy had to see so little of their husbands and wives. They were not thrown so closely together and did not have to daily rub rasped nerves against rasped nerves, or have their disillusions focussed on each other so continually as the poor do. Hence, they do not have so many unseemly spats.

"In this manner my wife and I dwell in our big house in outward amity and peace. She has her apartment. I mine. She has her allowance, paid into her bank; her own automobiles, her own independence in every way. Aside from a meet in our own home, or elsewhere, we are courtly and politeness itself to each other, but I often wonder if my wife and I are bored as I am, if the friendship of the outside world are as hollow to her as they are to me, if she yearns for the intimacy and companionship that is tried and proven, the love that is interwoven with the memories and experiences of half a lifetime that should be ours.

Both Growing Old

"We are both growing old. We are past middle age, past the time when either one of us can hope to inspire any sincere affection in a stranger, or make any new ties that would be disinterested. When young and beautiful women smile at me, I see behind them the jewels and fine gowns I am good for, on which their avid eyes are fixed. When young men hang about my wife I have a sinking vision of the champagne and opera boxes, and automobiles, and horses, and country places, the opportunities for flirtation with younger and prettier women that being in her good graces stands for to them.

"We alone could mean something to each other. We alone could be companions, friends, lovers as we go down into the twilight shades of the evening of life. And yet we two, who should be the closest together, are farthest apart of any two creatures on God's earth. We have but a thought in common, not an aspiration in common, not a hope in common.

"I often wonder why, of all the women in the world, I married her. I know she wonders why she married me, and yet when we were married no two people were ever more in love with each other, and this being true, the marvel is how we killed love between us.

"Whose fault was it, hers or mine? Mine, I think, chiefly.

"Yes, dust and ashes is on my head, because I murdered love. I did it, not with one swift blow, but I starved it to death through long arid years of neglect.

All For Money

"You see, when I married I had just begun to get a foothold on the ladder of success. I had just begun to make money, and the madness of that greatest and most absorbing game in the world was upon me. I was crazy for money, and more money, and ever more, more and more. For the sense of power it gave, the ability to do big things, to shape events, to be the little god of the machine that works the strings and makes the things happen wherein men marvel.

"I gave all of my time, all of my thoughts, all of my interests, all the best of me, to my business. I was jealous of home much of the time, called hither and thither by enterprises in which I was interested, and when I was at home I was often too absorbed in some money-making automation, or else I was a wreck of overwrought nerves and was as cross and surly as a sore-headed bear.

"I had brought my wife from out of a city family of charming and cultured people, who were most loving and affectionate to each other. I put her down in a strange city, and left her to her own devices, and the fact that I had done my full duty when I gave her a handsome home and plenty of money to spend, I never even thought of such a thing as trying to interest myself in her pursuits, or attempting to find out what she really thought, and aspired to, what sort of a woman she was developing into.

"I knew vaguely that she went into society. I grumbled at having to show my nose and then at dinner parties she gave. I went with her occasionally to the theatre, but mostly I was too busy to be her companion, and when I did go with her I was so absorbed in my own plans to give her more than a surface attention.

"So the years went by, and she went one way and I went another, and our paths grew farther and farther apart, and I, at least, was utterly unconscious of what was happening. I was confident that I was doing my part as a husband, because we had the finest house on the street, and I gave my wife diamonds at Christmas and automobiles on her birthday.

An Animated Checkbook

"I never realized that I had become nothing but an animated checkbook to my wife; that she had forgotten that blood instead of ether ran in my veins, and that I could feel some pang that was not caused by a slump in the Street. Still less did it occur to me that my wife might be starving for a little love, for a little tenderness, for some sign that she was something to her husband besides a stalking horse to show off his money.

"Then one day I woke up to the fact that she was as indifferent to me as I was to her; that she had passed into another world of new interests with which I was as unfamiliar as she was with mine, and that we two, who should have had everything in common, had nothing in common. And I was desolate.

"If I had to live my life over again I should devote less time to business and more to my wife. I should not make wealth the god before which I sacrificed. I should bow the knee to love.

"I should begin, from the very wedding day, to try to win my wife's friendship, so that when the fires of passion burned themselves out, as they are bound to do, we should have something to fall back upon. I should talk to her of her interests, and try to enter into them, just as I should try to make her a real partner in my own affairs.

"I should make her feel every hour of the day that she was the chief thing in my life, and that nothing she did was too little, or unimportant in the eye of love to engage my attention. I should strive to tell her of my love, to go with her to the places she enjoyed and I should surround her with a tenderness that never failed. If I did all this no doubt I should be able to give her less money and less of the things that money buys, but I do not think that she would care.

"If I could go back and live over my married life again I would neglect my business rather than my wife, and I believe that if I did I should not find myself desolate, a lonely man facing a lonely old age, a Dusty with an aunt's hand to hold in his—nothing but a bank book."

"True," said one of the women, "many a wife piles point lace and diamonds over her heart to try to hide its desolation even from her own eyes."

The Vanity Box

A Mystery Story of Absorbing Interest

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

SIR IAN and Lady Hereward, while visiting their neighbors, Mr. Forrester, learn accidentally of the presence in England of Teresina Ricardo, a beautiful young girl, with whom Sir Ian was infatuated while in India, prior to his marriage.

"She has decided to pay you a surprise visit this very day," says Mrs. Forrester.

Sir Ian and his wife hasten home to receive Miss Ricardo, but Lady Hereward leaves him when half way through the woods to Friar's Bleak, explaining that she has some souvenirs to distribute among several of her tenants.

Sir Ian meets Miss Ricardo, whom he has not seen for years. She notices that he seems distressed. She explains that she is visiting her cousin's wife a few miles away, and felt compelled to visit Sir Ian and his wife, who had been her companions in former years.

Mrs. Barnard, wife of Tom Barnard, farmkeeper for the Herewards, is attending to her household duties with little Peggy Pepper, six years old, playing at her knee. Suddenly, Lady Hereward's maid, calls to make a visit at the Barnard lodge. Tom Barnard, who was a soldier under Colonel Hereward and idolizes his old chieftain, is away at the village. The Barnards live under this shadow of having not yet seen Tom, which was built to afford the countryside a wonderful view of the hills of the Isle of Wight.

Mrs. Barnard tells Miss Craigie the history of Ian Barr. The old uncle of Sir Ian Hereward married an Italian opera singer, Teresina Ricardo, died, without learning whether his first wife was alive or not, old Ian married an Italian peasant girl. Ian Barr was born to them, the boy taking the name of Barr when he learned that his father's first wife was alive. Ian Barr quarrelled with Sir Ian when he than Barr learned of his father's deception, was cut off in the will, everything being left to Sir Ian Hereward, a nephew, while the old man died. Sir Ian tried to get Ian Barr to accept the fortune, but the latter refused and was subsequently persuaded to take the place of steward on the estate.

Miss Craigie goes, and shortly afterward Sir Ian appears and asks for Tom. His face is white, and he cries that his wife has been killed. When Tom comes into the room he sees the lower, where the former had found the body of his wife. Her jewelry is missing and it looks like robbery and murder.

Miss Ricardo is summoned to the inquest, where Sir Ian is the first witness. He tells of starting with his wife to walk home from Mrs. Forrester's. He says he left her at the Tower, at her express wish, and went the rest of the way home on his bicycle. He says that Miss Ricardo at his home. He says that he left his wife at the Tower at her express wish, and went the rest of the way home on his bicycle. He says that Miss Ricardo at his home. PART ONE—(Continued)

"HAD Miss Vanny been out?"

"I believe so."

"Did you know where?"

"I think—in the woods."

"Did you ask her if she had met Lady Hereward?"

"Yes, but she said she had not."

"Did you feel anxious when Lady Hereward did not return?"

"I thought I would look for her, when Miss Ricardo had gone, and I did so."

"You went back to the place where you had left her?"

"Yes."

Now, once more, the eager curiosity with which every one had listened to the story, as given in question and answer between the coroner and the witness, was overcome by a wave of sympathy for the pale man, thus led to the most terrible point in his narrative.

Met No One

"Did you meet anyone on the way?"

"No one."

"Or see any one at a distance?"

"I noticed no one."

"Were you absorbed in your own thoughts?"

"Perhaps."

"Could any one have passed at some distance without your attention being aroused."

"Possibly. I don't know."

"What did you first observe on reaching the knoll where the Tower stands?"

"When I first saw that my wife wasn't on the seat where I left her, I noticed to my surprise that the door of the Tower stood a little way open. I thought that she might be in the room—that she'd found the door unlocked, and gone in."

"You didn't think she had unlocked it?"

"I didn't think of that, at the moment."

"What did you see when you went in?"

Sir Ian's nostrils quivered. He tightened his lips, as if to keep them from quivering too. Then, for the first time he bowed his head, and told the story of what he had seen, with a voice that broke more than once.

He told what he had seen, and what he had done; how he had run down to the home farm of Riding Wood, to fetch Tom Barnard, and all that had happened there. As to the details of the sight he had had to look upon in the tower room, as few questions as possible were put, for other witnesses could paint that picture.

Only, at last, the coroner desired Sir Ian to tell the jury whether he had touched the body of his dead wife, or whether he had in any way disturbed the arrangement of the tower room as he found it on entering.

"I put my hand on her breast, to see whether her heart beat," the witness answered dully, looking at the coroner regard than when he had been called into the room. "I thought perhaps she might be living still. But when I found that her heart had stopped, I touched her hand. It was cold. I knew, then—there was no hope."

Vanity Box Missing

"Did you notice anything about her hand?"

"I noticed that her rings were gone—rings she constantly wore. And that made me look to see if other jewelry was missing. Her bracelet-watch was gone, and a brooch she had been wearing."

"Anything else?"

"I didn't think of it then, but afterward it was discovered that a gold case, like a cigarette-case, which my wife always carried, had disappeared. Ladies call that kind of thing a vanity box."

"Could she have dropped it in the woods on the way to the Tower?"

"She might have, but I don't think it likely, for though it used to slide off her lap sometimes, in the house, or she would leave it on a table, she always missed it instantly; and when she was walking, it hung from her wrist by its chain. It wasn't very valuable, I think, not worth more than twenty or thirty pounds, but she was particularly attached to it, for some reason."

"Had you ever seen the inside of this case, or vanity box?"

"Never."

"Could papers have been kept inside?"

"Only very small ones, if any."

"Would it have been possible that Lady Hereward had a reason other than the one she gave you, for wanting to be left alone near the Tower?"

"Other than the one she gave me?" Sir Ian repeated this question with a very slight yet peculiar emphasis, as if he wished to mark it in some way, in his mind. "I do not think so."

"She could not have expected to meet any one?"

"I feel sure she did not."

"Is there any one who, to your knowledge, had a grudge against her?"

For the third time when giving an answer, Sir Ian paused. His eyes were raised, and introspective, with an expression of distress, as if he saw some ugly image in his mind. "No," he said at last.

Suspected No One

"There is no one whom you could possibly suspect of having such a grudge?"

Sir Ian's pale face reddened with a sudden rush of blood which flowed over it, to the roots of his dark hair. "I do not think that a fair question," he said, "and I refuse to answer it. It ought to be enough that I know of no person who, even with a grudge, I should believe capable of murder."

"I am afraid I must insist on your answering the question," said the coroner, looking miserable, and looking as miserable as a felt.

"Very well then, I suspect no one," said Sir Ian.

"Remember you are on oath."

"You have my answer." And the soldier-face was very stern and grim.

Gently as Mr. Arnold Bland and admired Sir Ian Hereward, heartily sorry as he was for the ex-soldier's tragic affliction, and deeply as he regretted the official necessity of asking disagreeable questions (some of which had become necessary because of discoveries just made), he would not have been human, he would not have had a proper respect for his own calling, if he had not found himself slightly nettled by the attitude his chief witness now took.

It defied him, set him at naught both as man and coroner; and as he had tried to be best to be considerate throughout the whole examination, he thought that he had deserved a different tone from Sir Ian.

Several details into which he really ought to have inquired, if only as a matter of form, he left out, rather than distress the bereaved husband; and there was one query in particular which he had felt bound, yet dreaded, to put.

Perhaps, had Sir Ian spoken less brusquely, and looked less haughtily obstinate, he might have decided to waive it, with a few words, questioning her witnesses instead, as the whole county had always praised the devotion of the Herewards to one another.

But as it was, feeling himself ill used, suddenly he discovered that it was no longer so disagreeable a task to throw a certain question at Sir Ian's proud head.

"Were you invariably on affectionate terms with Lady Hereward?" he bluntly inquired.

Then, to the surprise of every one present, Sir Ian went from dark red to ghastly white. He looked as if he had been struck to the death. Not a sign in the room but felt his nerves jump under the shock of a dead and astounding suspicion.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

They Spend a Long, Tiresome Afternoon Looking for Apartments

"HERE, let's look at this!"

Warren paused before a large, white-stone-front apartment house. There was the usual sign, "Apartments to Let. Superintendent Within." They went through the long tiled corridor, with its artificial marble walls. In the rear was a switchboard, before which lolled a colored boy in brass buttons.

"We'd like to look at some apartments here."

"Yes, sir. I'll get the superintendent," pulling out a cord and inserting it in one of the holes above. "Hello! Some one to look at apartments."

Helen was gazing around the hall. There was a mission bench, and the inevitable domestic Wersion" sage, three of them, and back here the walls were panelled in oak and red burlap.

In a few moments the superintendent came up from the basement.

"What apartments have you?" asked Warren.

"We've three vacant now—two on the third and one on the eighth in front."

"How many rooms?"

"All six and bath. Would you like to see them?"

Warren assented and the man led the way to the elevator.

He showed them a third floor apartment first. The rooms were small and badly lighted and overlooked a narrow court. The floors had been freshly varnished, an odor of paint and turpentine filled the place.

Too Much Money

"This won't do," announced Warren after a hasty glance around. "We want more air and light. Let's see the one in front."

The front apartment was higher up and the rooms somewhat larger. The dining and library were thrown together by folding doors, and when the superintendent opened up one of the windows, a good breeze came through.

"Now this is more like it," said Warren. "What's the rent here?"

"$1,100 a year."

Helen glanced at Warren with a little gesture of despair.

"Have you no front apartments for less than that?" he asked.

"No, sir. All these front ones are the same."

Warren shrugged his shoulders. "Who are the agents for this house?"

"Clyne & Johnson."

"And I suppose if one got down to business they'd make a shave on that rent for a two-years' lease?"

The man shook his head. "I'm afraid not, sir. We've no trouble in getting our prices, and this is the only front one that's vacant."

When a few moments later they left the building, Helen said anxiously, "Don't you see, dear, that was nearly $100 a month. I'm afraid we can't get anything for $70 that's anywhere near as good as what we have."

"That's absurd. We've only looked at one place. And I'm not going to overwork myself this Summer in that apartment. You can depend on that. We'll get something with well ventilated outside rooms, if we have to go out of town. Here we'll try this one," stopping before a house in which a colored boy stood in the door. "They haven't so many house buttons on the darkey and I'll wager they're not asking as much for their flats."

"Any six-room apartments here."

"Yeah."

"How much are they?"

Worse and Worse

"I don't know, sir, the janitor ah's here, but I can show 'em to you."

He took them up to a front apartment on the top floor. But this was a much less attractive house than the other. The woodwork was cheaper, the mantels and fixtures garish in design, and the hideous wall papers spoke of the character of former tenants.

"Oh, Warren," whispered Helen," we couldn't stand this at any price."

"Well, you've got good air here and a good view, this overtops the house across the street."

"Oh, yes, I know, but the woodwork and the mantels and the whole atmosphere of the house! Did you notice the halls as we came up?"

"Well, you can't get everything. What we're looking for is cool, well-ventilated rooms."

"But Warren, just look—look at this bathroom," opening the door and showing the small tub and cheap furnished fittings.

The boy who had gone to answer the elevator bell came back now and stood at the door.

"Say, you don't know the rent here?" asked Warren again.

"No, sir. I don't knows exactly, but I thinks it's around $75."

"Seventy-five dollars for that place!" Helen exclaimed when they reached the street. "And our beautifully fitted apartment for $70! Oh, Warren, how can you think of such a thing?"

"But our apartment is jammed against a brick wall, and it's been hotter than Hades. What we're after now is pure air—even if we have to take less style with it."

Helen Gets Tired

Although their apartment had been very warm this Summer it was in an excellent house and beautifully appointed and finished. And Helen wanted to stay—she shrank from the thought of leaving. To her it meant so much more than just "an apartment." It was there she had come as a bride, and there Winifred had been born—no other place could ever mean so much.

They went from place to place until Helen was almost worsted. But they would find nothing that suited their taste that was anyways near as attractive as their own apartment.

"Dear, I'm so tired," said Helen finally. "I don't believe I can do any more to-day."

"Nonsense, we haven't done much. You'll have plenty of time to rest. We're here now, and we ought to see what's here. It's not an easy thing for me to take an afternoon off. Here, this place seems promising—let's have a look at it."

ALL IN ALL

Fred—I want some one to guard me against making mistakes, win my battles for me, and not take the credit.

Ned—What you want, my boy, is a wife.

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it.

I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODARD, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

The testimonials which are constantly being published in these advertisements are guaranteed to be absolutely genuine.

A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture

NOW CLAUDE ECLAIRE THE OIL IS ALL AROUND YOU AND THIS LIGHTED MATCH WILL DO THE REST WHEN YOU ARE DEAD YOUR ROSAMOND WILL BE FREE
YOU CUR!
YOU MAY RUIN ME IN THIS BUT MY OWN SCHEMES WILL NEVER MARRY YOU, DESMOND!
OIL
A FLYING FISH—AND IT'S HOOKED TOO, IT SEEMS! BITING FOR THE MATCH!
GERSHFIELD
CURSES! THE MATCH IS EXTINGUISHED AND THAT FISH IS SPOILING THE OIL AROUND
THE BLOOMIN' FISH IS FULL OF OIL! THERE MUST BE SOME HOOKED AND IF AXED TO DIE ON STONE, LET'S HUNT FOR IT
CURSES! I'M FOILED BY THAT FISH, CURSES!
IN THE NICK OF TIME! THERE IS THE OIL, BUT IS HE SAFE FOR LONG? HALT, YOU VILLAIN, OR WE SHOOT!
THE FIEND!
LOTS OF SPEED NOW AS I'LL HAVE TIME TO CHANGE THE PILE DRIVER WHEN I'M IN CHARGE OF CAREER
ONE TWO BRACE FOR PILE DRIVING
CURSES, BUT I SHALL STILL FOIL YOU, CLAUDE ECLAIRE, AND TRIUMPH!

The burning match is in the air! In a moment it will fall into the oil and set the flames blazing around Claude Eclaire, and then nothing can save him. Poor Rosamond, who has come to watch her lover as the fire is about to consume him. Desmond chuckles in glee as he sees his rival about to meet with disaster.

Just as the burning match is falling into the oil, a large flying fish shoots through the air. There is nothing wonderful about its flight—a swallow can beat it every time. A wonderful thing is that a fish can come out of the water at all, except in the form of a hook. However, the flying fish swallows the match.

Just as the flying fish extinguishes the match, it darts into the oil which Desmond has spread over the water. This may seem a trifling incident, but nevertheless it is fraught with great possibilities. The fish is an unconscious agent working for the rescue of the hero Claude.

The fish which has been hooked by anglers is now pulled on board their little boat. They find that their prize is worthless to them, but they need oil for their stove they decide to sacrifice the necessary fuel came from. Thus an important incident again works a change in several lives.

To the fishermen follow up the traces of oil, they sight the ship from which Desmond is towing the unfortunate but heroic Claude. The appearances of things do not appeal to the honest fishermen—they suspect foul play. And no wonder, as Claude, being rescued, he knows it would not be drenched with oil.

"I'm the cove!" cries Desperate Desmond, as he shoots head down to the pile-driver.

If he lands upon the wood, he is a dead villain. What is there to save the wonderful from destruction? Nothing, so far as any one can see. And yet we have a suspicion that to-morrow's pictures may surprise us.

Winning Success

Selling Eggs

By THOMAS TAPPER

I HEARD a young man make a speech the other day. He is twenty-eight or thirty years old, and his speech was full of sense.

I.

He talked easily, used the right word in the right place, and when he had said all he had in mind about his subject he stopped and sat down.

A good many speakers do not know enough to do that.

II.

This young man is a lawyer. He lives in a small city in New England, has a fair business, netting him from four to six thousand dollars per year, and his name is George Halsey.

When George was ten years he had to go to work. He had one hour before school and all the rest of the day after 4 o'clock to earn enough money to take care of himself. He began by selling papers at the railway station. Here he noticed that the express company handled many crates of eggs. These eggs were shipped by the farmers of the surrounding country to grocers, and then sold to families. This made George think.

On Saturdays, holidays and during vacation time, George went among the farmers and bought these eggs, duly paying the business out credit for the eggs, and with only enough cash to buy a basket.

He sold his eggs to families and reaped all the profits himself. He kept his newspaper selling going at train time, and was soon able to do a cash business.

Bit by bit he increased his stock in trade, and handled not only papers and eggs, but fresh vegetables and preserves put up by the farmers' wives and daughters—always buying from the producer and selling to the consumer.

In the course of time George graduated from the high school, having paid all his own bills for seven years and getting a rough but practical idea of business.

On the day that he graduated he had in hand his diploma, his experience, $125 in cash and an ambition to go to college.

In June, George walked to the college town where he hoped to enter as a student the following September, and looked it over. After an interview with the college president, he made up his mind that the money he had in hand and what he could earn in the ten weeks before college opened would give him a safe start.

During the first and second years, having no false pride to bother him, he earned more than his tuition by selling eggs, preserves and the like, to families of the faculty, and to others in the town. A boy who recites to Professor Brown in the morning and delivers eggs, on a cash basis, to Mrs. Professor Brown in the afternoon, is certainly not handicapped by pride. Nor did George live in the best house on the campus and wear low-cut tan shoes, with purple socks and a tie to match. In fact, I could not get him to tell me how he lived during those four years.

In the last two years of his course George edited the college paper and secured all the advertising it printed. This was good experience, but it cut down his income somewhat, a matter to be balanced by doing tutoring in the Summer months.

When he graduated from college George had in hand his diploma, $200 in cash and an ambition to go to a famous law school.

He went there in September, and, stopping at a fraternity house to ask directions, he met a lady by the name of Opportunity. She offered him the job of caring for the fraternity house in exchange for enough money to pay his room rent and board.

George grasped the lady's hand, accepted her offer, took off his coat and showed her how well it could handle dust and tidy up when he is in earnest.

Lady Opportunity smiled and said she would not forget him.

In two years George was a lawyer.

After graduating he went back to his old college town and talked over his future with his friend, the president, who advised him to settle in a certain New England city (where he still lives), and work until he succeeded.

George went there, knowing no one; he hired an office, furnished it simply, bought a sign, went to work on the door himself, sat down in his second-hand office chair and counted his money. He had thirty-one dollars.

It was Saturday.

There was a political meeting in town that evening and George attended it. He listened to the speakers and found a chance to say a few words himself. I suppose Lady Opportunity arranged that for him. She must have done so, for it resulted in his being invited to speak three evenings of the following week.

Then an influential man in town spoke to him and asked him to call upon him. Now George can been sleeping on a lounge, behind the screen in his office. So he said to the influential man:

"I am moving to-morrow to Elm street, No. 329."

George had walked down Elm street the day before and saw a room to let at No. 329. It was the best residence street in town.

He moved there the next day, and had a good street address to give those who asked him about it.

It was a hard struggle to make the thirty-one dollars grow, but George did it. Gradually he increased his earnings, and now, five years out of college, he earns from four to six thousand dollars per year.

He told me that he always reserves six to eight hours a week for study, aside from his law practice. He reads widely, and studies all the important questions of the day. He knows exactly what the United States is doing at Panama. He is well informed on forest preservation, and also has a practical plan for assuring a supply of lumber.

Now a great many people in the world have, at one time and another, sold eggs.

Most of them sell eggs for 20 cents a dozen, more or less.

George sold them for a college education and a chance to earn a good income.

Lady Opportunity, true to her word, has not forgotten him. The rewards she withheld from him in early years are now his.

Warranted to Wear

"NOW, lookee 'ere," said the farmer to the manager of an English cloth factory, planking down a big parcel of wool, "I 'ear cloth you made for me was so thin that I hardly knew when I'd got on a coat or not. So make this oop thicker, my lad."

The manager nodded. Business was bad. He could not afford to lose old customers, so he put his best work into the job.

Well, and is the cloth stout enough this time?" he asked a day or two afterwards.

"Stout enough! You couldn't break it wi' a battle-ram!" exclaimed the farmer. "Why, my lad, it be bullet-proof! Old girl and me we tried to bend it, but 'twerpen's no good. But that be all right now," he added. "I've just been to the carpenter, and he's goin' to put hinges on knees and elbows!"

The Gun Runner

A Thrilling Story of Wireless and War

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

GUSTAV LINGG, wireless operator on the Lamuian, goes ashore while his ship is loading at Port York and loses his way in a dense fog which comes in from the harbor, and is overpowered. On a side street he meets a beautiful girl whom he has never seen before, but who calls him by name, "I want to talk to you," she says, "I must talk to you—alone."

Overcome by shyness, he stares foolishly at her for a moment and then turns and flees. He goes a long way and finally, just as a ferry wheezily tells him that he is nearing the river, he finds a narrow street, only to find his way blocked by a hansom cab with a open door.

In the cab sits the woman from whom he had fled.

"Get in," she says, and makes him sit beside her. "What?" he asks, as the cab starts.

"Not to tell me the latest from Paris!"

He asks why not and she replies that it will not be safe. He apparently doubts her and she pleads with him. Finally she asks him to kiss her, which he refuses, away from her, throws her purse around his neck. In the midst of his struggles, the cab stops, the door is open, and a man drags him into the street. A crowd gathers and a policeman appears, who leads off the struggling pair. Then arrives a man appears, who flings off the policeman and pulls the other man back into the cab, calling out to the driver:

"To the police station, straight!"

The man who had attacked the operator then tells the latter that he is a friend of the man who has just driven off in the cab with Lingg and Wilkie's men and that the woman is also in the party of villains.

The scene changes to the deck of the steamship Leminan. A big shouldered man in a rain-coat is seen and is the passage, but the operator tells him the wireless apparatus is out of order and that he can't do any sending until he fixes it.

The captain calls for the operator to hurry up and get his apparatus in shape, through the relief can be seen an approaching warship. The man in the raincoat paces the deck, now and then stopping to glance in at the wireless apparatus. He is joined by a couple of messages signed Michael Duffy.

The next day the man hangs around the wireless cabin again after asking if there have been any replies to his message. The operator explains to him the workings of the wireless system and the stranger says he wants to send a message to New Orleans to inquire when a shipment of oil and mill shafting left that port.

The stranger inquires about the warship and the operator says she is bound for Culebra, off Porto Rico, having been ordered south on account of the Locomobile trouble.

"Ever make this trip before?" asks the stranger.

"Never on this tub," is McKinnon's response.

After beating around the bush for a while, the stranger finally says that he would like to make a good, round sum of money. He says that he is a man who represents the Consolidated Fruit Concern which has big plantations in Cuba, where a revolution threatens. He also says that Lingg, the famous wireless operator and inventor of revolutions, is on the ship. He wants the operator to hand up any messages which may come for this man Gimbel, who, he says, is booked under the name of Gilbert, until he has had a chance to see them.

"THEN why couldn't you accidentally miss a message? Or why couldn't you send it out without being sure that it was going to carry clear across to the next operator?"

McKinnon still looked at the other man. There was something so placid and intimate about the tones of the stranger's voice that the very purport of his suggestion had seemed robbed of its enormity.

"I wouldn't do a thing like that for five hundred dollars!" the operator at last declared.

The stranger looked back at him without a move of his great body to the steamer chair. McKinnon's glance of open contempt is nowise disturbed him.

"I'll give you one thousand dollars if you do it!" he said. His voice was quiet and unemotional as he spoke, and the operator swung about and peered at him. He opened his lips to reply, and then suddenly became silent. He shifted in his chair, as though to drew away from some tangible and precipitating temptation.

"I'll give you one thousand dollars," repeated the stranger. "And I'll promise to stand between you and any trouble you're afraid of."

"It's not what I'm afraid of," the other retorted.

"Then what is it? You fail to catch a message or two, and no one's the wiser. What of that? Good heavens, man, you're not doing anything crooked. Nobody's cut a throat here there in New York! Nobody's trying to get away from your Centre street people. You're not doing anything against the penal code."

Not Hurting Anybody

"Why didn't you go to the captain about this?" complained the operator, in a last note of concession in that complaining did not escape his companion.

"That long-nose?" he grunted in disgust.

"Being a low-brow, as you call him, might to make him all the easier to handle," suggested McKinnon, with his short and puzzling laugh. "And he's still the master of the ship."

"The captain has no more to do with this than Fo'kest himself!" And I imagine he'd rather be soaking in brandy peaceable than talking business to outsiders. This is something between us two. You're not cheating anybody. You're not hurting anybody.

"All you do is to help me win a big case, and get well paid for your trouble. And a twist of the wrist is what it costs you. For I'm assuming, of course, you can put that machinery of yours out of business for the time being without exactly showing how."

"I'm not easy enough," said the operator, with a stare at his apparatus. "There are a dozen ways of throwing a compli cated thing like that out of kilter. It's not getting out of kilter with the company that worries me."

"The company doesn't count, my friend. You're outsiders in this. And you get your thousand dollars in cold cash, to work on that read-disk of yours for half a year, if you want to."

McKinnon laughed a little. Then he grew more thoughtful, and was about to speak, when the quick tread of feet sounded on the deck outside. He caught up the phone "set" hurriedly and bent over the pine table.

The steps passed on, but the betrayal of indecision remained a consoling and glorious fact to the man in the steamer chair. It left him no longer in doubt.

He reached down into his capacious trouser pocket and produced a roll of treasury notes, held together by a double rubber band. He peeled off three orange-tinted twenty-dollar bills and folded them neatly across the middle, lengthwise.

Then, with equal deliberation, he thrust them into McKinnon's still hesitating fingers. The operator looked down at the money doubtfully and then up at the stranger.

Binding the Bargain

"That's just a trifle of twenties to bind the bargain," the latter explained. "You've got to get something for me taking up your time like this."

"But how are you going to clear me—I mean how are you going to make them see I haven't been acting against the ship. If it ever comes to a showdown?" asked the operator, not so much with timidity but more as though he took a morbid joy in toying with the dangers of the situation.

"There'll be nothing to clear, and nothing to show," the other retorted. "All you've got to do is to have a bad ear when a certain message or two happens along. But I'll go further than that just to put your mind at rest.

"Tomorrow, when I pay over the balance, I'll put it down on paper, with my name to it, that I guarantee to protect you. We can both sign a note showing we're acting straight and where we stand. Then you'll have me tied down in black and white. That seems square enough, doesn't it?"

"Oh, it's square enough. But suppose this man Gimbel comes on me with a note demanding to know why I've got to show it to you, and if you don't approve of it I've got to get the fist that the message has been delayed? I keep lying to him every time he asks me about it."

"You're not paid to be a 'fence' for a gun-runner, are you?"

The other man laughed a little. Then he rose heavily to his feet. His head almost touched the cabin ceiling. "There's not much danger left ever to ask about it, when you know the man and his business. you'll never let things like that worry you."

"That don't excuse me—his being a gun runner."

"Well, if you felt that way, of course, you could send the message. Only you might send it as I mentioned, with the risk of failing short, I mean; some time when the engine room doesn't happen to be giving you quite enough power."

Would Hate to Lie

The operator weighed and pondered the question. The man beside him was a remarkable enough in his ideals of conduct. He recognized no authority beyond the dictates of his own sweet will. He was a criminal and fcnl conditions—went back to them with the disquieting directness of a passage.

"I do have to call until I get my station," temporized the operator, "and the other fellow's O. K. after he'd get my call. Then he'd signal, 'Go ahead,' to show he was ready to receive, and if I failed to reach him he'd keep 'coming back' for me to repeat."

"Then, too, what I was trying to send might be picked up by any stray operator behind the skyline. On the other hand, if I let the message go, after getting my 'go-ahead' signal, the thing would be reported and looked into. And that would mean trouble with the company when I got back."

"Then when you get your 'go-ahead' signal why couldn't you fool for low and even pitch that your receiver or coherer, or something, was out of order—that you were cut off from receiving?"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BOTH ARE FREE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man three years my senior for six months and I dearly love him.

At times I think he loves me, and other times he is cross.

He has entertained me considerably, but lately he has been out alone with other young women and also to entertainments, while I was home.

As I go no place without him, and go out with no other young man, I think he should do the same.

M. H.

YOU are both at liberty to choose your friends and associate with the ones you most like.

Do not take this young man feel that he must go with you only. Take interest in what he is doing, put yourself out for him, so that he will enjoy parties and people only when you are there.

Never expect much from him, but make up your mind to show yourself to the best advantage, and if he isn't able to appreciate you then you need never regret losing him.

If you had friends, girls of your own age, you would enjoy life far more. You could be helped by them in all kind of trouble, as they also have had such worries.

You might then plan parties of your own, combining the pleasure of their company with that of their various friends.

GIVE HIM UP

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and am in love with a young man three years my senior. I met him while employed in the same office, and we were very much together. Our friendship grew into love.

I went out a great deal with him to the theatres and dinners, and we completed some days spending mapped out or postponed them by letter or phone. When I see him now I merely bid him the time of the day.

Can you tell me what I should do under the circumstances. "PERIE."

THIS is a terrible experience for you, but under such circumstances a woman has no choice of action.

Write to the young man at once and tell him that your engagement is at an end. If he cannot be thoughtful and unselfish now he will not be able to control these tendencies later, and will make you very unhappy.

Try to dwell on the fact that you have made a merciful escape and that time will lessen your suffering.

Old Pals

By ADA PATTERSON

"SO long, old pal."

One man stepping out of the surging crowd which poured out of the six-fifteen twirled his cane over his shoulder and started up the street, flinging his farewell over his shoulder at the man who had swung aboard a car, taking a rear seat on a covered smoke. Neither looked at the other. I knew both men and knew that their destination was the same office building. Though they called each other "old pals," they were not pally enough to forego the desired walk of the one, nor the smoke of the other, to extend that chance morning meeting on the train.

The word "pal," like friend," is much misused. We are wonderfully gifted persons if we possess in all the world a half dozen friends, and if we have one pal, which means a friend in all weather and all seasons, we are fortunate beyond most of our kind.

The only actual pals I know are a pair whose late is while with the suave of fifty Whiters to which they married together. Some of the Winters were dependently hard ones and their line of march was sometimes hewn along rugged ways. But the bitter coldness of the Winters and the harshness of the marches have not forced them apart, as the extreme hard times, like extreme softness, of life is liable to do.

The Comfort Purveyor.

They are a woman and a man. I mean, thus the woman first, because the Whiters were a little colder and the coldness was harder for the female, the woman seems to me the chief old pal.

She is the comfort purveying for the other old pal. He, though his duties are a little rickety, still goes forth to his work every day, and shows himself a brave soldier by being glad that there is work for him to do. Instead of whining at the need of it he keeps their plain little rooms shining by deny. She cooks the dishes he likes, taking care that they be tempered to his aging digestive apparatus.

And when he starts downtown to work she follows him to the door, to see whether he has his rainy umbrella to protect him from sun rays above and rabid dog bites below. She gives a final glance of inspection at his collar to see whether it be neat and upright, at his hat to see that no deck of dust remains on it. Then she gives his cheek a pinch and his arm a pat and watches him out the door and down the street, calling, Don't walk fast in this heat, dearest." She hobbles—she hasn't been on her feet for many a year—to the window and looks after him as proudly and with the same look in her eyes with which northern look after their lan-legged, sturdy brown-faced, round-eyed offspring at play.

He stops at the corner and looks back, touching his hat with a half military salute, and smiling in a slow, grave way. Sometimes she walks to the corner with him, for she told me she was never "easy in her mind" unless she had seen him go aboard the car.

"The cars go so fast," she complains, "and the conductors are in such a hurry. They don't give people a chance to get on and off."

Proves His Palship.

It would be rank disloyalty, this old pal thinks, to admit that the step of the other old pal is growing slower or feebler, that the difficulties of getting on and off the cars are increasing. She never confesses her inability to him except by a making cheerful adjuration at parting, "Now be careful, dear."

He, in turn, accepts this case as a matter of course. But he proves his palship by always wanting "mother" with him, by being a forlorn, dismal creature when he has to make a neighborhood call or "take the air" in a walk or a street car alone in the evening.

If ever he looks back in vain for sight of the pallid, smiling face, with its crown of white hair, at the window, or if she has no longer any need to go with him to the door, this will soon flicker and fall for the other old pal.

The individualists are having their day. Home is scanned as an argument to most theirs that as the first institution in self-preservation, so the first duty to self-development, cost what it may of heart ache and heart break. One cannot make answer to their plea for self-reliance that the bitterest pain in the world is that of depending upon another and finding that one unworthy, or unable to bear that burden. I cannot refute them by word, but we can tell them to watch the old pals, and the lesson is that are old pals to the end of life—never man and man, or woman and woman—but a man and a woman in the old bond of marriage.

Up-to-Date Jokes

"I wish some time, Mr. Speeder," said the doctor, "that you would bear our hospital in mind, and, if it appeals to you, do something for it."

"Great heart! Sqnills," retorted speeder, "why must you be satisfied? That new building is not enough? Must I contribute two pathons a day to your old charity. What more do you want?"

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the New Drug

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength, which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion, that is sold by Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless, and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. for the double-strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Get In the Game! Enter the American's Great $10,000 Proverb Contest

"Why don't you get a set of back numbers and go in and win that $2,500.00 Seashore Home?"

Why don't you?

That question is being answered daily by hundreds and hundreds of American readers all though our own New England States—in every hamlet, village, town and city. The answers are plain to be seen in the throng of new contestants hastening to enter the friendly lists of wits provided by the American with rewards to the value of $10,000 for the slight mental effort involved.

Answers may enter the American's $10,000 Proverb Contest today, to-morrow, or, in fact any day up to the publication of the last puzzle picture, No. 75.

But—remember the old adage—"First come, first served"—While this does not apply in this case, still it is a mighty good scheme to get a reasonably fair start in a competition of any nature.

Two aides who begin to solve the proverb pictures to-day for the first time will not have so long to wait before Picture No. 75 appears as those who began on the first issue, and Mr. Latecomer in this contest is as no disadvantage, because of the back number privilege.

The back numbers of the puzzles that have already been published may be had at the "Contest Department," at the regular rates of the American for the days on which the puzzles originally appeared.

Sunday back numbers are 5c. (plus return postage); daily back numbers are 1c (plus return postage). You may call for them or order them by mail. The Contest Department is at 275 Devonshire St.

Everyone is earnestly urged to enter the $10,000 Proverb Contest. There is no red tape or trouble about entering.

The way to do it is simply to solve to-day's puzzle picture, and so on, from now until the last picture, No. 75—meanwhile sending to the Contest Department for the back numbers of the pictures and answer blanks you may have missed.

These will complete your set to date and place you in line for the winning of the magnificent $2,500.00 Seashore Bungalow Home, an Automobile, Motor Boat, Piano, a $200 Symphony Grand Graphophone, or any of the other 999 big prizes.

Don't fail to equip yourself with the helpful and only official Proverb Contest Book.

This volume contains the correct answers to each and every picture which will be used during the contest. It contains over three thousand proverbs and is the one guide to the correct and the only one on which contestants must rely.

A copy of the PROVERB BOOK will be mailed to anyone who sends a money order for 25c to the "Contest Department, 275 Devonshire St." Those who care to, may call for same at the Contest Headquarters at the same address. Be sure to get the American's PROVERB BOOK.

Conditions of the Contest

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in written in the boldest either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participation in any other contest now being run or about to be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Any contestant or any of all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from acceptance in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

The will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the prescribed time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper.

The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Boston American CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS UNDER HEAVY SELLING

NEW YORK, July 25.—Under a heavy selling fire the stock market opened weak and irregular to-day with initial declines which were increased by further liquidation following the opening. Union Pacific opened at 180¾, or 1¾ under yesterday's close, and rapidly sold down to 180. Reading opened ⅝ lower and lost another ⅞ within a few minutes. Amalgamated Copper, American Smelting, Erie common and Steel were all off ⅝ in the first sales.

There were several contributing causes for the weakness. One was the news that a number of the wire manufacturers indicted for infringement of the Sherman antitrust law had decided to go into Federal Court and plead "No defence." Others were the disturbing influences of the day's European news and the filing of the Spokane case order by the Interstate commission.

Profit taking in London also exerted a sympathetic depression in the New York market. Within a few minutes after the opening here further losses were recorded in the railroads, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, and a number of other railroads which had opened fractionally off, sold off in a full point's loss. Southern Railway forced by sympathy and lost ⅝ in the few sales. Pennsylvania opened unchanged, not influenced one way or another by the announcement that the road contemplates spending $5,000,000 in improving the terminals in New York city. After fifteen minutes of trading the list had steadied somewhat.

The curb market opened dull and sag. Standard Oil was off two points and American Tobacco off four. There was considerable profit taking on Americans in London, and the general market tone there was weak and irregular.

Notes for Investors

The very heavy buying of pig iron that has been going on of late has failed to give prices a substantial upward tendency and is a good deal of a disappointment.

$ $ $

The only soft spot in the situation is that very few of the trade journals issued this year are as optimistic as they usually are at this season. Reports from the leading crop districts are not at all worried over the disapproval of the rise in the stock exchange by persons who fail to appreciate its value. It is no shock for a margin trader, but it has considerable investment value.

$ $ $

Underwood Typewriter stock is being purchased again by the same interests that controlled it up from 65 to 111. The Underwood Company is making very large earnings and the dividends are not at all worried over the disapproval of the rise in the stock exhibited by persons who fail to appreciate its value. It is no shock for a margin trader, but it has considerable investment value.

$ $ $

Pennsylvania directors have decided to expend about $2,000,000 altering the central station at Thirty-fourth street to enable it to make it a real station. The thing is the vast as it sounds that when a passenger gets in under its roof he needs a cab to get to the railroad. The railroad company will also, it is understood, cover with fort buildings most of the space between the Pennsylvania depot and New York Central is finding out building very profitable. They have already begun to construct over the Central's right of way between Fourth and Fifth avenues, and may be paying 10 per cent. on the cost. New York Central has also decided to put up a twenty-three-story hotel, to be called the Commodore Amsterdam. There is also talk of a vast hall to take the place of Madison Square Garden, but the hotel plans are ready for inspection by contractors. The New Haven Railroad is paying half the cost.

$ $ $

In behalf of the owners of securities it can be said that all the agitation against the trusts has simply served to show that the principle on which they are organized and has turned their interests once. Laws passed by Legislatures can never overturn a law of trade if the law of trade is correct, and correctness of law can only be determined by actual trial. The law of the single gold standard established itself through centuries of experience, and Congresses and Legislatures in various parts of the world did themselves the honor of confirming it by statute, thereby performing a very solemn farce.

$ $ $

An astonishing proposition of the politicians is to have the Public Service Commission in New York city name the price at which ice and other commodities should be sold in the market. If the Public Service Commission undertakes this on the ground that it is a public necessity, it will also have to fix the prices on eggs, bread, clothing and other absolute necessities of life.

$ $ $

One has only to apply the rules of logic to the vagaries of to-day to appreciate how queer they are and to realize on what a foundation of bubbles the opposition to the trusts is reared. In fact, the thing is ranging to such absurd extremes as to suggest that the trusts themselves are financing political attacks.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JULY 25, 1911

Mr. White and the Fight by the Interests to Keep Him on the Railroad Commission

There is travelling from mouth to mouth at the State House a whispered story that the railroads and street railways have turned the flank of Governor Foss in any attempt by him to reorganize the inefficient Railroad Commission by appointing some one in the place of Mr. Clinton White, and that these corporation interests have consumated their flanking maneuver by fortifying themselves behind the Governor's Council. It is said that these special interests expect to prevent the displacement of their friend, Mr. White, by preventing the Governor's Council from confirming any other man.

There are several reasons for doubting the truth of this rumor. One reason lies in the known record of Mr. White, the other lies in the known character of Governor Foss, and the third lies in the obvious folly, impropriety and misfeasance of the council in lending itself to any such scheme.

The people created the Railroad Commission to watch their interests and to guard them against being overreached by the railroads and street railways. And how have they been guarded since Mr. Clinton White became one of the three guardsmen? Probably worse than they would have been protected if the corporations had remained their own monitors, on nearly all the great questions of policy where the public interests stood squarely opposed to some vital demand of a railroad or powerful street railway.

The AMERICAN would do Mr. White no injustice. But it is scarcely possible to be unjust to him in any charge that he has been subservient to the corporations, and has seen things from a corporation rather than a public view-point. A man with a record of many public acts cannot fairly be judged by only one of them unless it is typical of the rest. But when they are nearly all of the same character we may judge him by almost any one of them.

Taking the last two most important acts of Mr. White as evidence that he has experienced no change in his view of his public duty, we think that a good judgment may be found of the man by his characteristic attitude on the question of issuing a certificate which would permit the Boston & Eastern Railroad to proceed with the construction of its electric railroad, and the recent report of the majority of the joint Board of Railroad and Rapid Transit Commissioners, in which Mr. White joined.

It is not necessary to repeat the discreditable story of the behavior of Messrs. Bishop and White against the protest of their colleague, Chairman Hall, in the Boston and Eastern controversy. Suffice it to say their action was disapproved by their own colleague, Hall, two Governors, the Legislature and the entire population of the great County of Essex.

Their purpose, as if anything so utterly bad could have succeeded, was to deprive the populous North Shore district of a fast electric train service which will take people from Lynn to Boston more cheaply, and more quickly than the railroad, with the health, cleanliness and comfort of an electric motive power.

Mr. White recently joined in recommending that the Boston Elevated be given control of our subways for a period from forty-two to fifty years, and, again over the protest of Chairman Hall, he joined in the recommendation that the West End Street Railway stockholders should be given eight per cent. upon the common stock after they had declared the year before that seven per cent. was sufficient, and in the teeth of the fact that the stockholders themselves, by accepting seven per cent. thirteen years ago, had admitted that seven per cent. was enough.

So much for Mr. White's guardianship of the public interests.

But the Governor, the Public Franchise League, the Chamber of Commerce and all the influential newspapers of Boston united to form a vigilance committee that discarded the nerveless guardsman and his recommendations.

The result of their labor is a law which gives the Boston Elevated only a twenty-five-year lease of the subways, and gives the stockholders of the West End Street Railway no increase in their dividends unless, at the end of the lease, eleven years hence, the conditions warrant it in the opinion of three arbitrators to be appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

To have increased these dividends from seven to eight per cent. as Mr. White recommended, would make the people of Boston pay to the West End stockholders a tribute of $125,000 every year forever.

In these two instances Mr. White was not only not a defender of the public interests, but he actually took the field against the people.

The citizens of Essex County, having a right to expect Mr. White's assistance, were obliged to overcome his opposition by appealing to the Legislature and the Governor in order to get a needed extension of their transportation facilities.

His expressed opinion that the West End stockholders ought to be given a present of three million dollars obtained a meretricious importance from his official position and has tended greatly to increase the blind and selfish obstinacy of some of the West End stockholders.

These are only the very latest incidents in a long course of conduct of which these incidents are truly typical, and the exceptions are only the kind of exceptions which prove the general rule.

It is difficult to believe that a Republican Council would think of throwing down the gauntlet to a man of Governor Foss's fighting character in defence of a man with Mr. White's record.

An attempt to keep Mr. White in his place by refusing confirmation to anyone nominated for the office would not only be exercising an unconstitutional prerogative, but would be giving to Governor Foss and the Democratic party a powerful issue which would bring certain victory in an appeal to the people.

To believe that the Republican leaders will permit the Republican members of the Governor's Council to enter upon any such a conspiracy, is to believe that folly has run amuck in the Republican party.

LET'S SEE YOU'VE BEEN MARRIED A WEEK
YES, AND MY HUSBAND IS A REGULAR DOCTOR JEKYL AND MR. HYDE!
GREETINGS! SO GLAD TO SEE YOU!
AH, HA! JUST A LITTLE TETE-A-TETE!
OH! MERCY!
RUN! EDITH, GET AWAY!
WHO IS THAT PEROXIDED HANK OF HAIR? GET HER OUT OF HERE!
I'M SURPRISED!
HE CAN'T HELP IT!
AH! MY WIFIE! WHERE IS SHE?
OH! WHAT A MAP!
I'M VERY SORRY! INDEED I AM!
YOU INSULTED MY OLD CHUM, CAN'T YOU CONTROL YOURSELF? MAMA IS GOING TO CALL ON US
AH! HERE SHE IS, NOW HELLO! MY GOOD MOTHER IN LAW!
COOING LIKE DOVES!
SAY! YOU NOSEY OLD WITCH! BEAT IT OUT OF HERE! GWAN!
OH! DEAR!
I MUST TRY TO CONTROL MYSELF, I MUST!
WHAT D'YE THINK THIS PLACE IS? I'LL FIX 'EM!
I FEEL IT COMING ON ME—
IF I HAD ONLY KNOWN THIS BEFORE WE MARRIED
WHAT'D YOU'VE DONE YOU PIE-FACED SCRIMP? TELL ME!
LET'S MAKE UP! I SPOKE HARSH, I KNOW!
ONLY A WEEK SINCE WE MARRIED AND YOU SPEAK TO ME SO BRUTALLY! OH! I'M SO PEEP'D!
